

INTERIOR JOURNAL--EXTRA.

STANFORD, KENTUCKY, SEPT., 9, 1873.—8 O'CLOCK, A. M.

THE CHOLERA!

No New Cases in Stanford This Morning.

Four Old Cases Doing Well.

No Cholera in Danville, Hustonville, Shelby City, Crab Orchard or Somerset.

No deaths, no new cases in town or vicinity to report up to the present hour. For this, all our people are grateful to the Almighty. Having passed safely through the fog of Monday morning, and the East wind of that entire day, our prospects for a speedy farewell to the pestilence are quite flattering.

We now have in town four cases of cholera, two boys and two adults. (Louis Bryant and Lou Williams) all colored, and all of whom are doing well this morning. We hear of only two cases of diarrhoea this morning, Mr. A. R. Penny, one of our vigilant and faithful druggists, and Wash Gentry, (col). Both of these have received prompt medical attention, and will be all right during the day, as no other symptoms of cholera attend them.

Special to Interior Journal.

LANCASTER, Sep. 8.

We hear of no new cases of cholera at this date, either in town or country, and those reported on last Saturday, also two or three cases of flux, are still under control. There is a heavy fog over our town this morning and the atmosphere is very cold. But few persons on the streets. We have strong hopes of keeping the health of town in a better condition from this date, as everything indicates an abatement of the terrible scourge. We would impress it upon those who left Lancaster at the time cholera appeared, that they should not return home for several weeks after the disease disappears.

COLUMBIA.

Twenty deaths from cholera have occurred in Columbia up to Friday night. The disease abating.

LOCAL INCIDENTS.

Our correspondents are requested to write very brief news letters for our next edition.

Our town presented a more lively appearance last Monday for a few hours than at any time since the cholera appeared.

Mrs. Rachel Tevis, consort of the late Napoleon Tevis, died of flux at her residence in this county on Saturday evening, September 6th, 1873.

The latest news from J. K. Sewell, (our foreman) who is sick with cholera at Lebanon, is, that he is rapidly improving. His was a very severe case, and his recovery is due to the faithful attention given him by relatives and friends.

Judge Sandley arrived home last Sunday evening and opened County Court promptly Monday morning. Only two attorneys in attendance, and business generally continued. The last will and testament of Mrs. Rachel Tevis was probated. Fifty dollars were appropriated for the burial of paupers dying with cholera.

The fatal case of cholera which we reported yesterday morning occurred in the Western suburbs, some distance from the locality of its first appearance. The new cases, Louis Bryant and Lou Williams, both colored resided about the centre of town, and the fears of some of our citizens were greatly aroused, and on Sunday evening another panic was imminent. One of our physicians thinks the disease will yet assume an epidemic form.—Let us face it like men, with a calm confidence in our sanitary preparation and in the strict observance of common sense rules in regard to our diet and sleep.

Lebanon.

Cholera is reported better in Marion county, and no new cases in Lebanon. We were informed by an eye witness that thirteen coffins left Lebanon yesterday morning for different sections of the county. Dr. Smith, of Crab Orchard, died in Lebanon with cholera on Friday. A correspondent of the Courier-Journal asserts that he was grossly neglected by the Guthrie Hotel, and too hastily coffined and buried. A private letter to her friends here, states that Mrs. Ann Wilson is still improving, and hopes are entertained of her final recovery.
