GOOD OLD DAD IS HERO OF 'REMEMBRANCE'

Big Feature at Washington Thursday Night Is the First to Make 'Dad' the Hero.

The Goldwyn super-feature, "Remembrance," written and directed by Rupert Hughes to be presented Thursday night at the Washington theater, is a marvelous picture that deserves to be ranked with the finest photoplays ever screened. Its appeal is tremendous and its theme is a very beautiful one that has not heretofore been utilized in pictures.

"Remembrance" is a story of character rather than plot, although there is ample story thread to carry the action through interesting and logical developments resulting from the extravagance of an inconsiderate family. The scene is laid in a medium-sized town where the father has built up a successful department store and the mother has acquired social ambitions in which she is seconded by her sons and daughters.

Richard Warner, colored, a tenant on the Dan Mabers farm in the Pleasant Ridge neighborhood, was found dead at his home Wednesday evening by his wife, who had been absent from the house at work all day.
