THE JAILER'S OFFICE

Elsewhere in this paper will be found excerpts from the report of the last grand jury in so far as it relates to the office of Jailer of Madison county. The report is worthy of the deepest consideration. If its charges are true, then there exists a state of affairs in this highly civilized county that is appalling, is offensive to the decency and intelligence of the people and humiliating to the county. But the strangest part of the report is that the grand jury of its own motion and after its own investigation of the facts upon which it based its report, failed to return an indictment against the jailer. If the report was true—and the grand jury couldn't doubt the truth of its own report—it failed to discharge its duty when it failed to return an indictment against the jailer, because the oath which it took, required it to make an indictment for all infractions of law of which it had knowledge or may receive information. The report also was a severe arraignment of witnesses who appeared before it and whose memory of facts were not such as the grand jury thought that it should be. In fact, the report as a whole was of the highly sensational order and is the talk of the county. But gentlemen, why be so severe in your strictures on others for failure to discharge a sworn duty, when you set them the copy? People are thinking along this line also as well of the severity and character of your report.

GOVERNMENT

The people establish their government for its monetary value as well as for its value to society. Without law and order, society disintegrates. Without law and order, property would be worthless. Therefore, the people are willing to pay a reasonable sum for that which makes their property and their well being secure. But when that reasonable amount is exceeded, then government fails of its objects; at least in one particular; that is in the protection of property from confiscation. If the people of Madison are getting all that is their due from the money that is exacted from them, then they have no cause of complaint. If more is being taken from them than enough to defray the legitimate expenses of the county when its fiscal affairs are prudently administered, then the government which they support by their hard earned cash, is not giving to them the protection for which they pay. It shall be the purpose of the Madisonian to examine into this question at length and give to its readers its conclusions.

HON. W. B. SMITH

We believe that Madison county would be delighted to honor Hon. W. B. Smith with office of Representative. He is both able and active, and is advised as to the needs of the people.

He would make a member who would reflect honor on the county. He is in full sympathy with the masses of the people.

Caustic Report of The Grand Jury on The County Jail

The report reads in part as follows: "We inspected the County Jail and found it in bad condition. The walls were black and dirty and besmeared with tobacco juice and the floors were in the same condition while cobwebs and dirt occupied the corners and ceilings and the cages are infested with vermine. There are forty-one prisoners confined in jail, 24 white and 17 negroes; all males and the pests that gnaw upon their human bodies, we suppose to be direct lineal descendants of the third plague that God sent upon Pharaoh and the Egyptians; and we as the representatives of the good people of Madison appeal to you in your official capacity to take such steps as the law directs to put the county institutions in a sanitary condition and thereby relieve the unfortunate inmates of their plague and the county of the disgrace which such conditions naturally bring upon a civilized community.

"We recommend further that the County Judge be requested to visit the jail oftener and give it such oversight as the statute directs."

Mr. Jones says that he can explain to the satisfaction of the people why the jail was not in a "spick and span" condition when visited by the grand jury.

It certainly is up to him to do so.

Rev. George Stuart's Lecture

Monday night at the Normal chapel the inimitable George R. Stuart gave one of his characteristic lectures. There is only one George Stuart in the world. He is an apostle of earnestness, an overflowing fountain of mirth, a lover of all things good, a sympathizer with every good man and with every worthy movement. The lecture covered much territory but was a delight every step of the way. We wished that even the ground had included a few hundred acres more. There were assaults on the follies of the day, skirts anent the short skirts, bombs placed under the madness of money-making, ridicule for the merchant who shuttles back and forth from home to store, a human pendulum that never stops until the undertaker steps in. There was myth and wisdom all the way through, and much wholesome advice to young and old. Rev. George Stuart forgets all about the occasion and proceeds to deliver his message, but the place never forgets him, admiring or loving him into immortality. He ought to be on the lecture course every two years at least. When you look at him you say here is a fool or a philosopher; when you hear him you know that the fool is the man who would mistake George Stuart for one.

He had been in ill health for some time, but the immediate cause of his death was due to heart failure. He leaves four children, Mr. I. D. One of the saddest deaths, that has ever occurred in our city was that of Mr. Green Million who died on Thursday night as the result of injuries received by falling from the midnight train from Winchester, Wednesday. He was found early Thursday morning and brought to Richmond, where he was hurried to the P. A. C. Infirmary. Everything was done that medical skill could suggest to relieve him, but added to his serious injuries, the long exposure in the cold made his recovery impossible. No young man in the community had more friends than Mr. Million. Of a genial whole-souled disposition, he endeared himself to men, women and children, and many hearts are filled with sorrow at his untimely end. To the devoted mother and sisters the deepest sympathy is felt. May the Almighty sustain and comfort them. The funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. Walton on Glyndon avenue at 10:30 Sunday morning, thence burial in the Richmond Cemetery.

From Our Exchanges.

At Cynthiana, Wednesday, Newton Arnold, of Paris, has his examining trial before Judge King, and the accused was held to await the action of the Harrison county Grand Jury.

Arnold was represented by Hon. Edwin P. Morrow, of Covington. A number of witnesses were examined, after which Judge King announced that the prisoner would be refused bail. Arnold was ordered returned to the Fayette county jail, where he has been confined since the killing of Bailey.—Paris Kentuckian.

The old Clark county jail was sold at public auction Tuesday for $482. W. E. Singleton being the purchaser. He will use the material for building purposes and begin at once to tear down the old structure, which is one of the landmarks of the county. The tollgate property on the Ecton pike, also the property of the county was sold to Mr. John Ramsey for $503.00. The quarry property on the Mt. Sterling pike, containing about an acre of land, was sold to Col. Rezin Scobee for $162.00. Auctioneer Watts conducted the sale, and Judge Evans, who enjoys seeing the county treasury swell with the filthy lucre, was well satisfied with the sale.—Winchester Democrat.

The case of the City of Georgetown against Mrs. Mary Cecil Cantrill, widow of the late Judge James Cantrill, of Georgetown, was tried at Georgetown, and the jury disagreed, and upon change of venue was transferred to the Grant Circuit Court. The case grew out of an accident to Mrs. Groff, who drove over some logs in the street at night, and who sued the city and recovered judgment for $3,000. The city claimed that the logs belonged to Mrs. Cantrill, and the city accordingly sued Mrs. Cantrill. The case was tried last week at Williamstown, Ky., and the jury brought in a verdict for Mrs. Cantrill. Attorney Robert C. Talbot, of Paris, attended court there last week, representing Mrs. Cantrill.—Kentucky Citizen.
