YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Topic: "Obedience." (I Sam. xv, 22, 23; I Kings iii, 14; Rev. xxii, 14.)

The young people's topic for conference in the various denominational societies to-morrow evening is "Obedience," which is based on three different scriptures, I Samuel xv, 22, 23; I Kings iii, 14, and Revelation xxii, 14. The first relates to the disobedience of Saul, the first King of Israel, the second includes a promise made to Solomon at the time he assumed the sceptre of Israel, and the third is the beautiful promise of Christ to all who seek to render him true obedience.

The kind of obedience under consideration is that which every one is expected to render to the revealed will of God. This will has been clearly outlined in the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, and which constitute the only infallible rule of faith and practice. It is that obedience which lies at the foundation of right relation to God and right relation to human society. It seeks to lift the human soul up to the plane of its first relation and put it in a position of communion and fellowship with God. In a word, it is conformity with the original law of being.

IMPERATIVE—Such obedience is imperative. There is nothing else that can take its place. Samuel said to Saul, "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Saul had been commissioned to go and "smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have and spare not." But instead of doing so, Saul spared Agag and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them."

When confronted with his disobedience, Saul at first said, "I have performed the commandment of the Lord." But Samuel called his attention to the lowing of the herds and the bleating of the sheep, he said he had done this in order "to sacrifice unto the Lord." But Samuel replied, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." In other words, he was given to understand that there was nothing which could take the place of strict obedience to the express commands of God. This law has never been changed, and is as binding to-day as when first established. It is our imperative duty to conform to will of God as expressed in his Word, regardless of all other considerations. Subterfuge is not permissible and is sure to be discovered. Too many effect to compromise obedience by rendering some sort of consideration. But this will not work. Some men acquire wealth by shady business transactions, and then seek to ease their conscience by making some large donation for charitable or religious work. This was the fatal mistake of Saul and is the devil's own subterfuge to-day.

PUNISHMENT—Disobedience is sure to bring its dire reward. It cost Saul his kingdom, and it will cost any man the kingdom of heaven who tries it. Said Samuel to Saul: "Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being King." And Saul said unto Samuel: "I have sinned." What would he not have given to be able to undo his act of disobedience? But, alas, it was too late. He was now to reap as he had sown. Like many a man since, proud and defiant until his sin overtook him, and then ready to part with everything for restoration. But sooner would the Niagara return back over the falls than that man could undo the sin of disobedience. But is there no hope? Yes, but only in the mercy of God as exercised through Jesus Christ. He "bare our sins in his own body on the cross" that we might "hope in his mercy." But this door of mercy is open only to those who truly repent "and do works meet for repentance." It must be no half-way matter. Like the poor publican to which Christ refers, there must be a crying out, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner."

BLESSINGS—The closing thought of the lesson in hand is that of the blessings which accrue in consequence of obedience. The promise made to Solomon was, "And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments as thy father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days. So also in Revelation, xxii, 14, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates of the city." Thus it will be seen that the blessings promised are both temporal and spiritual. Had Saul obeyed the voice of the Lord, he would have been established in the kingdom of Israel. Had Solomon continuously walked in the footsteps of his father David, the kingdom would not have been divided, and his life would not have gone out in a shadow. If we obey God rather than man, we will not only have right to the tree of life here, but shall eventually enter into the eternal city.

First of all, there must be obedience to the supreme command of Christ. Says the apostle John: "This is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son, Jesus Christ." This is the supreme test of our obedience. The man who is unwilling to start here will necessarily lead a life of disobedience to the supreme will of Christ. The law of the gospel requires this unconditional surrender in order to salvation. Our disbelief in this requirement will not effect in the least the awful consequences of final disobedience. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Disobedience is sin, and "the wages of sin is death." Obedience is life, and "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Obedience, first, last and always is the supreme rule of life. Blessed be Christ's name. "If we confess our sins, he is just and faithful to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousntss."
