Continuing he inquired if it were possible that the House must confess, now that its last intrenchment has been made "by a subordinate executive officer," and said that the contempt which had been extended to the House and the violation of its rights, constituted the measure of respect, attention and submission which it deserved.

USURPATION OF POWER.

He referred to attempts made in England to usurp the legislative authority and declared that the President's order was the usurpation of power "not by appropriation, but by interpretation," which he attributed to the "pusillanimous failure of Congress to do its duty to itself."

DECLINE OF POWER.

After attacking what he declared to be the President's usurpation of power of interpretation, when he said that the order should not be retroactive, Mr. Cockran appealed to members on both sides of the House "to consider the enormity of this proposal," which, he said, affected the liberty and safety of the Government.

DECLINE OF POWER.

In sarcastic vein he declared that the President allowed Congress the privilege of declaring war, and he was loudly applauded by the Democrats when he added: "But the President makes war when he chooses to."

REVERTING TO THE PRESIDENT'S ORDER.

Reverting to the President's order, Mr. Cockran contended that the Secretary of the Interior justified the action upon the precedent of President Cleveland. "Well, sir," he said, "pacing up and down the center aisle, if that be so, then in God's name let us condemn that act of Mr. Cleveland's as voluminous as the act of any Republican President." The disposition to justify almost everything by pleading "that Mr. Cleveland did it," he vigorously declared, "is the highest of compliments that can be paid to a man by any Congress in our political history."

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.

New York, April 9.—After vainly demanding $500,000 from William C. Greene, president of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company, in the course of a dispute over a mining deal, James W. Goodman of Nogales, Ariz., was arrested on a charge of felonious assault with attempt to kill.

START FOR OFFICE.

Goodman met Greene to-day near Broadway and Seventy-second street, and it is charged that he threatened to kill him, but Greene told him to come down to his office and matters could there be satisfactorily settled.

DRAWS REVOLVER.

As if to emphasize his words, it is further alleged, Goodman pulled out a revolver from his hip pocket and pointed it at Greene.

GREEN TELLS STORY.

"This man Goodman disposed of stock in the American mine to a man named Smith. This man then drank and gambled the money away and it was not until he had spent all the money and found himself broke that he came to me and claimed that he had been swindled."

GREEN TELLS STORY.

The defendant asked for a postponement and the Magistrate, turning to Mr. Greene, asked: "Do you think this man can furnish $1,500 bail?"

PRESENTS OLD CLAIM.

"I did not know this man until three weeks ago, when he called at my office and said there were 5,000 shares of the Yaqul Copper Company due him. He asked me to go and straighten out the matter for him. I went to the office of the Yaqul Company and arranged with the president and secretary of the company so that Goodman would receive all that was due him. The stock was made out and left there, so that he could call for it a few days later. Goodman called and refused to sign the receipt for the stock, so he did not get it."

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.

St. Louis, April 9.—I am informed that a St. Louis paper charged that I denounced the Irish Catholics in my speech at the Chateaufort Hall indignation meeting, and that the charge has been copied by other papers in the State. A man who would be guilty of so grave a breach of propriety would be lacking in both ordinary intelligence and decency. The charge is willfully and maliciously false, and is prima facie incredible. I refer to any reputable person, of any creed or party, who was present at that meeting. He is of a piece with the contradictory charges they are making against Mr. Folk personally.
