New York Press Comment on Mr. Tilden's Letter

From the Post-Dispatch.

New York, June 12.—The World says: "Mr. Tilden has written and addressed a letter to Mr. Daniel Morrison, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of New York, in which he reiterates in emphatic terms his determination to withdraw from public life. In this letter Mr. Tilden reviews his public services, his efforts in behalf of pure and just government, and his devotion to the cause of reform. It is a masterpiece of composition. No one can read it without realizing its sincerity and feeling the inspiration of integrity and noble purpose which courses through every line. However this document may be accepted by the Democratic party, it is certain to increase and intensify the esteem in which Mr. Tilden is held, to warm the corner in the heart of the great organization in which he abides. Great always, and wise, and far-seeing, Mr. Tilden's power and fitness as a leader never appeared to better advantage than in this letter, and it is in the completest sense a justification of the confidence reposed in him by his party. The concluding lines are full of pathos, are tinged with a sentiment which will move all hearts. 'Having given to the welfare of the Democratic party and the republic,' says Mr. Tilden, 'whatever of health and strength I possessed, or could borrow from the future, and having reached the term of my capacity for such labors as their welfare now demands, I but submit to the will of God in deeming my public career forever closed.' These are words that will live in history."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "The honor that if the rich reward of noble services faithfully rendered was never brighter than at this hour. Mr. Tilden has once been elected President of the United States. Superior to all thought of personal ambition, he has twice declined a re-election and the years of life that still remain to him will be made happy by accumulating acknowledgments of the nations debt of profound gratitude and veneration."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "It would be but a slight recognition of Mr. Tilden's motives and of the circumstances under which his letter is written to say that his act is an unselfish one. It is more than unselfish. In the present divided condition of the Republican party it is an act of great moment and promise. It removes from the Democratic party a prospective candidacy which it seemed to desire to consider inevitable; a candidacy sure to be welcome to a large portion of that party, but obviously not equally acceptable to the independent vote which the Democratic party can bring into alliance with itself in the coming canvass."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "Mr. Tilden's candidacy would have been given especially great prominence in the canvass to the villainy and corruption of the Republican party and have made that the leading issue, and his name would have had an overwhelming force as the champion of the cause of the people against an official oligarchy determined to hold on to power at any price. For that reason it would have been well if he could have accepted the nomination, and we do not believe that his age would have unfitted him for a vigorous discharge of the duties of his office. But it is doubtful whether any other candidate can call out so absolutely the whole vote of the Democratic party, it is certain that some others, perhaps only a trifle less satisfactory to the Democratic opinion, will be a great deal more satisfactory to a vote that is to be of much moment in this election—the vote of the independent Republicans. Consequently Mr. Tilden's refusal may not prove an unmixed evil to the Democrats."

CANT SUPPORT BLAINE.

Republican and Independent Papers Bolting the June Nominations.

From the Post-Dispatch.

New York, June 10.—Mr. George William Curtis returned from his defeat in Chicago yesterday morning. He went straight to his office in Pearl street, pulled off his coat and began the preparation of an editorial which shall indicate the attitude of Harper's Weekly in the coming Presidential campaign. When a reporter called upon him he refused to be seen, pleading as an excuse the accumulation of business during his absence. The following note was sent to him: "Will Harper's Weekly support Mr. Blaine in the coming campaign, or will it do all in its power to compass defeat?" The reply came back that the Weekly itself would answer that question. While returning from the Convention Mr. Curtis, in conversation with a friend, said: "I am unwilling to say anything whatever about the ticket. I expressed myself to the convention as to the character of the men who ought to be the leaders of the Republican party, in the coming battle. Neither Blaine nor Logan reaches that standard."

IN OPPOSITION TO THEM.

This would give the appearance of pique or disappointment. There is plenty of time between now and November to determine what the independents will do.

A reporter visited the publishing house of Harper & Brothers in order to obtain, if possible, an authorized announcement on the subject. In reply to his inquiry, a representative of the house made a statement, by authority, that Harper's Weekly will oppose the Chicago nominations; that the decision to this effect was reached by the members of the House unanimously and that the pen of George William Curtis and the pencil of Mr. Uros. Nast will be exerted in support of this course.

John Austin Stevens was asked if he would not vote for Blaine. He replied that in no case should he vote for Mr. Blaine, still he was disinclined to, and could not vote for a candidate of the Democratic party. Mr. Stevens added that he thought the mission of the Republican party was finished, and that there would be no difficulty in organizing a party without a nominee that will take in the best men on economic principles, which includes both the Democratic and Republican parties' best men. In the Republican party there are hosts heading to the old traditions of the Whig party, he thought, who favor revenue tariff. In contradiction to this statement there are hosts of the best men in the Democratic party who favor protection. In view of these two points Mr Stevens believes that a party without a nominee can be organized to take in both these classes, based on economic principles. Mr. Stevens concluded that there is no national question which now divides the two parties and he does not believe that any question of personal nominees will enter the campaign. NEWSPAPER OPPOSITION TO BLAINE.
 Newspaper opposition to Blaine grows stronger daily. Last evening the Post, which bitterly opposes him, printed a list of the independent and Republican papers which are openly committed against him. It now stands: New York Times, New York Herald, Harper's Weekly, Puck, Evening Telegram, Brooklyn Union, Rochester Post-Express, Rochester Herald, Syracuse Herald, Flushing Times, Boston Advertiser, Boston Transcript, Boston Herald, Springfield Republican, Philadelphia Record, Philadelphia Times, Chicago Times, Chicago News, and New Haven News.

In addition, several influential papers like the Buffalo Commercial-Advertiser and the Boston Journal are very cool in their support. The Commercial-Advertiser of this city has not defined its position, but evidently has no intention of advocating Blaine.

Winning Without New York.
 Kansas City Times.

The nomination of Mr. Blaine was made upon the theory that the party must win without New York. It was a confession that New York would go Democratic, and that success must be looked for, if obtained at all, from strictly republican states.

The Chicago Tribune used the argument ingeniously and plausibly, but come to examine it and it is shown to be very specious. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat puts the certain democratic electoral votes at 136, and the republican at 151. But to make this plausible showing, it ridiculously places Virginia and West Virginia in the doubtful column with their eighteen votes, alongside of California, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey, New York and Ohio. It says:

If Blaine can carry Ohio, California, Connecticut, New Jersey and West Virginia, he will not need New York to insure his election; or if he can carry Ohio, California, Indiana and either Connecticut or West Virginia, he can let the democrats have New York and still come off victorious. But if he should lose New York, Indiana and the Virginias, and carry all the rest of the doubtful states he would be defeated.

But Mr. Blaine has no more show of carrying Virginia or West Virginia than he has of carrying North Carolina and South Carolina. At the very last election Mahoncism was repudiated. The little boss is repudiated, and in the future will cut no figure in the state. Hancock carried West Virginia by a plurality of 11,000. The greenbackers used to be strong in West Virginia, but Hancock's majority over the combined Republican and Greenback vote was about 1,000.

The Greenbackers have called a convention and will have a State ticket, so that all hope of a coalition of the greenbackers and republicans vanishes. Virginia gave Hancock 43,000 majority, and is more democratic to-day than ever before.

The positive Democratic vote—the Southern vote—is 153, and it is so usually estimated by republicans as well as democrats. The number required to elect is 201. New York and Indiana will give the number and three to spare; but the Democracy having New York will have to gain but 12 votes to insure an election. To get these they have California 8, New Jersey 9, Connecticut 6, Nevada 3, and Oregon 3, to draw from, in all 29 votes.

Of these states California, New Jersey and Nevada are now in the hands of the democracy with good working majorities, not to mention Ohio with its 23 votes, which state is in the hands of the democracy and is a decided advantage in a close contest.

Conceding 151 votes to the Republicans, with California, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey, New York and Ohio doubtful and they have 50 votes to gain. Where can they get them with New York in the democratic column? From the 61 votes cast by these doubtful states they must get 50 votes. It cannot be done with Blaine bluster and brag.
