No trouble to swallow Dr. Pierce's Pellets.

"I'm going to get married," said a young traveling man to a bachelor friend.

"Indeed. Well, I wish you much joy, and I trust that you realize the responsibility you are about to undertake."

"Yes sir; I think I realize the responsibility. I have settled down, and changed my habits very much."

"That's right. Spend your evenings at home and read good solid books."

"What would you recommend?"

"I think 'Paradise Lost' would be the best thing you could take for a starter."

"Yes, sir, you ought to be ashamed of yourself to let your pale sickly wife chop that knotty wood!" said a citizen to McElroy Mulcahey.

"Never mind, she has beautiful teeth," remarked a kind friend.

"How's business?" asked a reporter of a court-plaster manufacturer.

"It's been good, but we are preparing to shut down for the winter."

"Shut down! Why is that?"

"Why, you see, the base ball season is almost over."
