AN AMUSING WAR STORY.

How One Johnny Reb Was Not Cheat- ed Out of a Promotion.

The interest in war stories never abates. Fifty years from now it will be greater than ever. There are tales of heroism and tales of suffering, all more or less touching. There are quaint stories, amusing and otherwise. Here is one:

The incident occurred in action beyond Fredericksburg on Monday, May 4, 1892. Sedwick had captured the heights on the previous day and marched from the Rappahannock to effect a junction with Hooker, at Chancellorsville. Lee's army, however, intercepted him. He suffered severely near Salem church on Sunday night. Meantime the confederates went around his flank occupied Fredericksburg, taking as prisoners those wounded in the assault on the heights. He was thus cut off from Hooker's army.

On Monday evening Lee's troops made a determined attack on Sed-wick in an effort to drive him into the river. It was a desperate fight.
The confederates, as usual, charged in several lines. In some places the union lines were broken and there were hand to hand fight over cannon.
But the troops always rallied to the original line of battle. The last confederate charge was repulsed about twilight. Darkness soon came. There was no moon, but the woods were afame, adding smoke to the smoke of the battle. The air was filled with the groans of the wounded and dying. Some were being roasted in the woods.

A skirmish line was sent out to ascertain whether the confederates were forming for a new charge. The writer was a volunteer. We had gone out some distance when we came to a fence that had been thrown down in the assault.

I stooped close to the ground, looking at the limning of the sky.
This is a habit contracted while on picket duty at night. I saw in the distance lined against the sky a figure I knew. It was that of Corporal Nason, of Newark, N. J., who had gone out with me on the line.

Between Nason and myself shot a human figure. The confederates were doing the same as we were doing, feeling for their opponents. The skirmishers were passing each other in the darkness. Shouting to Nason, I turned and overhauled my confederate skirmisher, who had gone between us. Nason came up on the other side; astounded at our appearance, the Johnnie threw down his gun and began to take off his traps.

An order came in withdrawing our skirmishers. It was passed along the line. We took the prisoner with us. He was a member of the Thirteenth Mississippi and said he came from Pontiac. He had a haversack made of undressed cow skin, to which a pair of new shoes were strapped.

On reaching the old line of battle we found that our troops had already been drawn back toward some earthworks constructed by Wilcox's and Jenkins' confederate brigade before Hooker had crossed the river.
Regiments were moving in the darkness, and there was very little noise.

Our prisoner answered all questions in monosyllables. He seemed much cast down. He listened to pleasantries, but made no return.
At last, learning that one of his cap-tors was a member of the typographical union, he opened his heart.
He said that he was a printer and that he had been serving in the confederate army ever since the war began. He was trying his best to drive the invaders from the soil of the south. He had tried earnestly to do his duty and had never shirked a battle. It had taken over a year for the officers of the regiment to discover the merits, but at last they had to do so. He was told that he was to be made a corporal on the following day. His capture would lose him the honor, and he was totally broken up about it. His voice was pathetic. If he had lost his mother he could not have been more grieved. His trouble touched our hearts.

Poor Nason, who was afterward killed at Peterburg, suggested that we let him go. I replied that he would be certain to be captured by some body else, who possibly might not have so much sympathy for him.
They might rob him of his shoes and haversack, and turn him over to

IT WAS A HUNGRY CROWD.

Fifteen Masked Men Rob a Farmer of Eatables.

The citizens of Henry and Metz townships are exhibiting deep interest in an occurrence in that section Thursday night. It is said that about fifteen men visited the home of John Stockard who lives near the township line and calling out the man and his three sons covered them with guns. Numbers of the party not engaged as guards ransacked the house and out buildings. They found in the smoke house about 1,200 pounds of meat and appropriated it. Other eatables were also taken, but aside from food other property was left untouched. The men had handkerchiefs tied over their faces, and they were not recognized. The raid was made about eleven o'clock. There were seven guns and pistols on the place. These the visitors took the precaution to discharge before leaving the place.
The event promises to be more than a nine days wonder.

New Tariff Bill.

Washington, D. C., March 22.— The Democratic members of the Senate committee on finance have been assured of the President's cooperation in having the tariff bill become a law, as he has expressed his approval of the bill as a whole. In the course of a conversation with a member of the committee, Mr. Cleveland referred to the bill and took occasion to say he hoped it would pass and that there might be as little delay as possible in getting it through the Senate. He spoke of the condition of the country, which was such as to render it important that the agitation of the tariff subject should be terminated at the earliest possible moment.

There has been some apprehension as to the way in which the President might regard the income tax in the shape agreed upon, and also the sugar duty, but he is said to have spoken in not an unfriendly way in the interview mentioned of these two items, not so much with reference to the principles involved in the provisions as of the fact that they would assure a sufficient revenue for the necessities of the government. The friends of the Senate bill are encouraged to believe that the President's position with reference to the bill as now prepared will strengthen it materially in the House.

To Fight to a Finish.

San Francisco, Cal., March 22.— A large fierce grizzly was captured some time ago and was purchased by Colonel Boone, the lion tamer.
Among the other animals owned by Boone is a lion named Parnell, which has a record for having killed numerous keepers. It was proposed to put parnell and the grizzly in the big cage of the arena at the Midwinter fair and let them fight to a finish.
Tickets at $20 were selling like hot cakes. The secretary for the prevention of cruelty to animals has had interviews with Mayor Elliott and the chief of police, who assure him every assistance for preventing the brutal affair will be given.

Robert Kincaid Arrested.

Robert Kincaid has been arrested at Mound City Kansas on a charge of embezzlement. He is accused of appropriating $316 belonging to the McLaughry estate of which he was administrator. The charge was made by one of his bondsmen. Kincaid was on the point of starting to Des Moines, Iowa, when the arrest was made. He promptly gave bond and proceeded on his journey.
