

THE CLARION.

THE TWO BRIDES.

BY R. H. STODDARD. I saw two maids at the kirk, And both were fair and sweet; One was in her bridal robe, One in her winding sheet.

HON. ROBERT H. COLQUITT, U. S. SENATOR-ELECT FOR GEORGIA.

Alfred H. Colquitt, recently elected United States Senator for Georgia, for the full term beginning March 4, next, was born in Walton County, Georgia, April 20th, 1824. His father served in both the House of Representatives and the Senate at Washington. The Senator-elect was educated at Princeton College, where he was graduated in 1844. A year afterwards he began the practice of the law at Macon, Georgia. He fought in the Mexican war with the rank of Major, and was an aide to General Taylor at Buena Vista. In 1848 he resumed the practice of the law at Macon. He was elected a member of the Thirty-third Congress as a Democrat, in the year 1852, but declined renomination at the expiration of his term, on account of the death of his wife. In 1856 and 1860 he served as a delegate to the National Democratic Conventions, and was an elector on the Breckenridge and Lane ticket. He fought with distinction in the Confederate army, and rose to the rank of Brigadier-General. At the close of the war he entered the insurance business. His appointments in 1868 and 1870 as delegate to the National Democratic Convention and as president of the Democratic State Convention respectively, and his being delegate to the Baltimore Convention of 1872, were his leading political honors from the period of the war until his election as Governor of his native State, in 1876. He was re-elected for a second term, and retired at the beginning of November, 1882, when Governor Stephens succeeded him. Ex-Governor and Senator-elect Colquitt gives great encouragement to agriculture. He was made president of the State Agricultural Society in 1870. In person he is large and handsome. He is dignified but kindly, gentle but firm; and is an earnestly religious man, and a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The Woman's Annex at Harvard.

Helen D. Brown writes in Woman's Journal of the Woman's Annex at Harvard that there are two recitation rooms, which Mr. Howells might call "sincerely bare" but which are amply comfortable for their purposes. It was at the opening of the afternoon session that I happened to be present. Through the rooms sounded the happy school-girl chat and laughter. I listened and looked to see if these young girls had caught the severity of their studies, but I could not see that they were strikingly or painfully different from other girls in their teens. I saw neither blue-stocking nor butterflies, but many earnest young faces, alight with intellectual life. In the sunny parlor, with its home-like belongings, had gathered Prof. Hill's rhetoric class. A half dozen young ladies sat about informally while the professor read his lecture. He had just delivered the same lecture to the sophomore class in college, and adapted it to his present audience by means of frequent parentheses. It was something after this fashion: "Unless a man acquires a taste for reading before he goes into business (or a woman before she marries), it cannot be cultivated in after life. The trouble with the writing of you young men is that you have nothing to say. (And the same, I regret to add, is true of young women). I have seen letters written by graduates of Harvard College that would disgrace a boy of ten. (Of graduates of the annex I am not yet prepared to speak.) Whatever the liberally educated man (or woman) should or should not know, no argument is needed to show that he or (she) should be able to write good English." Do the annex girls enjoy the advantages of Cambridge society? is a question often asked. No; partly because the students are working women, without leisure for frequent engagements; partly because Cambridge society is busy and absorbed, and does not go out of its way to offer the annex social culture. Cambridge, England, is said to have adopted Girton and Newnham with motherly cordiality, an example that might be gracefully followed by its American namesake. Do they see much of the Harvard students? is a question that soon follows. No; their work never brings them together, and they show, on all occasions, a wholesome indifference to each other's presence. The annex students have perfect freedom in arranging their homes. They often board in groups of three or four, and thus enjoy that taste of boarding-school life without which no girlhood is quite complete. The Board of Managers—among whom are Mrs. Arthur Gilman, Mrs. Agassiz, and Miss Longfellow—exercise a friendly care over the health and happiness of the students.

The Tailor's Art in Massachusetts.

In a town not many miles from Boston, a man stepped into a neighbor's house where he saw the head of the family lying upon his back on the floor, and his wife standing over him as he thought with a threatening air. He was about to withdraw when the prostrated man shouted: "Come along in, Steve; she is only chalking me out a pair of pants."

Watermelons in December.

The Bradenton Progress gang had a splendid watermelon for lunch on the 14th ult. How is this for weather, ye Blizzard-mitten Northerners?

After Twenty Years.

A FATHER AND DAUGHTER MEET—MUTUAL EXPLANATIONS ENTERED INTO. Special Dispatch to the Globe-Democrat. HANNIBAL, Mo.—Quite a sensation occurred here on Monday last, which it was the intention of the parties most interested to suppress; but your correspondent "got on," and gives the facts as related by one who knows. In 1863, in Schuyler county, Ky., a man and wife named McAnn were divorced. They had two children, a boy and a girl. By mutual agreement the mother took the daughter and the father the son. The father went to Indiana, where he married again, while the mother remained in Kentucky, where she found a second affinity. Subsequently Mrs. McAnn also went to Indiana to live, while McAnn left there and came to Pittsfield, Ill., where he resided up to a few days ago, when he came to Hannibal to make his home. The son died about a year ago, and the father did not know whether the daughter was dead or alive. About a year ago the daughter, now a grown woman, left her mother and went to Kentucky to live with her aunt. A month ago the aunt accompanied by the young lady, removed to Hannibal, and on Monday last the daughter, in conversation with a lady here, stated that she thought she had some relatives in Missouri named Brown, but she did not know where to look for them. The lady spoken to remarked that she knew a family of Browns here who were related to some of the Kentucky McAnns. This led to a clue, and Miss McAnn at once dropped a letter to J. F. Brown, who is in the employ of the Northwestern Lumber Company, asking an interview and appointing a place of meeting. Mr. Brown recognized the name as that of a cousin whom he had never seen, and kept the appointment accompanied by her father, for such he proved to be. As neither had seen the other for twenty years, explanations took place which readily convinced them of their relationship, and to-day father and daughter are happily united, and living beneath the same roof once more.

PRIZES OF THE HAREM.

HOW ENGLISH GIRLS ARE DECEIVED INTO THE SERAGLIOS OF THE EAST. It is quite notorious, says the London World, that every harem in the East aims at getting a European tenant for it. Year after year, girls are reported to be missing from London or Paris or Brussels without anyone knowing what has become of them. In a few days they are forgotten; they may have drowned themselves, become reformed or died their usual death. Sometimes the story is that the girl has been decoyed to Belgium; though why Belgium, which is blessed with a plethora of that particular species of frailty, should cart coals to its own Newcastle is not easy to explain. Meantime it is impossible to pass along the streets of London without seeing snaky-eyed Orientals peering into the faces of millinery girls; and he must be an unobservant traveller indeed who has sailed in a Peninsula and Oriental steamer for Alexandria or Port Said without meeting the same rascals enticing rosy-cheeked damsels Cairoward. The supply is perhaps a little less than it used to be when Ismail Pacha ran special trains for the convenience of his consignment from Europe. But that in Egypt, India, Turkey and the Orient generally, every harem of any consequence keeps in its gilded cage one or more frail or foolish Britons is a fact which it is needless trying to deny, though it is humiliating to confess. These wretched girls are tempted by a life of ease and indolence. They are dazzled by a show of jewels, fine clothes and the stories of the gorgeous East, and find too late that they have entered a squalid prison, amid women as heathen as any whom the world can show, and with whom it is impossible to exchange a word to while away the loneliness of a life which has lost its novelty. So long as they keep the favor of their lord, they are objects of persecution and plots; when they lose it, their lot is unhappily beyond conception. Such stray lambs are seldom sought after, though to their relatives they are as much lost as if they had plunged into the sea. The harem rarely surrenders its prisoners, and if it did they are too ashamed to return, poor and disillusioned.

Armed to the Teeth

It is a very common expression, but we think that armed to embellish and preserve them to a ripe old age is decidedly more appropriate. This can be done by keeping yourself supplied with a bottle of that splendid dentifrice, Fragrant SOZODONT, which will beautify the teeth and preserve them from the ravages of decay. SOZODONT contains no acids or gritty substances which injure the enamel, but is composed of rare and antiseptic herbs, which have a beneficial effect on the whole economy of the mouth. Sold by druggists.

How to Abate the Tramp Nuisance.

Let women be brought up to habits of industry and economy and learn to support a husband, and the tramp nuisance will soon cease.

SHE attended a ball—danced to a late hour—became overheated—went home thinly clad, in a cold, damp night air and caught cold. Next day—headache—loss of appetite—slight fever—dry skin—pains and aches—chilly sensations—indisposition to get up. Remedy—one bottle Dromo-gool's English Female Bitters.
