

Proper Way to Feed the Hen

Hens come from the roost in the morning give PATSY'S SCRATCH FEED, to each ten should be thrown in straw or a litter of some kind, the hens scratch or hunt for the feed, thus necessary exercise.

Scratch feed is not conducive to good results, PATSY'S SCRATCH FEED contains the necessary to produce flesh, bone, muscle and the egg. Scratch feed, then give all of AUNT PATSY'S FEED they will eat. This, however, should not be found or in the grass, as in that case the hens valuable ingredients necessary to produce the Feed AUNT PATSY'S POULTRY FEED in a old fashioned pig-trough style. That is, together edgewise and insert end pieces. Then nail slats, leaving a space between same and rough to admit of the hen putting her head in at the same time keeps her from getting up in her feet thereby scratching the feed out on the

of this feed, J. P. Gentry, has 64 laying hens average of 44 eggs per day. If you want your year round, buy a sack of AUNT PATSY'S D.

POULTRY FOOD can be fed either wet or dry.

show a fully maintained, if not an improved condition as compared with last month. Most authorities agree that cultivation is the most perfect ever witnessed and that the plant is now beginning to feel the good effects of this year's liberal fertilization. In this respect conditions are just the reverse of last season when the young plant seemed to lack stamina and the heavy rains which then prevailed interfered greatly with cultivation. It is not surprising, under the circumstances, that some influential interests have turned bearish in their outlook.

victions and are predicting lower prices in the long run, although admitting that bull support and uncertain weather conditions may bring about temporary rallies and therefore a more or less two-sided market for the time being. "Domestic manufacturing conditions have been so well known that the action this week of a number of Fall River mills in reducing dividends, in some instances passing them altogether, occasioned no surprise. For foreign reports would seem to indicate that the avenues of consumption have been pretty well filled up and as a consequence a general curtailment policy will soon be inaugurated. A London despatch says the Master Cotton Spinners' Federation have decided to recommend the shutting down of mills on Saturdays for twelve weeks. From France come reports that mills are closed 1-2 days each week. In Austria many mills are stopped entirely, the remainder working on a 20 per cent reduced schedule, while in Austria and Germany a 25 per cent reduction of the annual production is in force on an organized basis. "The statistical situation although admittedly strong, has evidently lost its influence as an important market factor, and although the near positions, showed some hesitation in following the downward movement in the new crop options, rather indicating that controls has not as yet passed from the hands of the powerful bull clique, there is no doubt that commitments in July and August are being reduced as rapidly as possible without permitting the market to get out of hand. And small wonder, for stocks of cotton at an approximate cost of 15 cents a pound can hardly be considered desirable in face of continuing prospects of a record breaking yield. In this connection it should not be forgotten that the time is fast approaching when new arrivals of cotton will make their appearance, which will make the situation very difficult for a handful of men to control. Viewed from every standpoint, therefore we see nothing at present to warrant purchases on a large scale, although in making unconditional short commitments, weather in the cotton belt is naturally still to be reckoned with."

'the great seal of the Southern Confederacy, presented by Judah P. Benjamin,' and I have no doubt it is there yet.

"W. McK. Darwood."

What became of the seal of the Confederacy has always been a mystery, and the foregoing is of interest whether there is any truth in it or not. The probabilities are that the writer was misinformed. The general belief has been that it was dropped into the Savannah river when President Davis and his escort crossed that stream on their flight from Richmond after the surrender at Appomattox.

According to the Charleston News and Courier Judah P. Benjamin was with President Davis when he passed through Asheville, S. C., on his way south, and the latter asked as Abbeville gentleman to take charge of certain boxes, which he explained, he valued highly, as they contained family portraits, and to ship them to him in England when he received word to do so.

Mr. Benjamin begged that the gentleman in question personally see the boxes safely aboard ship, which was done some months later and they were delivered to Mr. Benjamin in London. In view of the fact that the gentleman who shipped them was satisfied that they did not contain family portraits lends interest to the story related by the Times correspondent. It should be easy enough to discover whether or not the seal is really in Trinity Library at Cambridge, England, or whether it is merely a copy of the Great Seal of the Confederacy.—Columbus, Ga., Enquirer-Sun.
