The Vicksburg Herald

A most heart-sickening tragedy occurred on the steamer Fair Play, about 9 o'clock, last night, in the killing of Mr. A. Bachman, a pedler, about 50 years of age, by William Gibson, a deck-sweeper on the boat. The homicide took place after the Fair Play had left the landing and reached King's Point. An eye-witness informed us that Bachman was sitting on the coal pile, in front of the fire-box, leaning against his packs asleep, when Gibson approached him with an ax, and without saying a word dealt him three heavy blows on the head with the edge of the instrument. Bachman uttered a groan, but being propped between his packs and a barrel on which our informant was sitting, could not fall over. On learning of the murder, Capt. Bookout had the boat turned back for town, placed a guard over Gibson, and on arrival here, turned him over to the police. Gibson says that some time ago the old man accused him of breaking open his pack or valise, and they had some words about it. Yesterday evening he met Bachman on the levee and the latter told him he was going up the river on the Fair Play. Gibson very coolly relates: "I told him if he got on the boat I would kill him, and when I saw him sitting down in front of the fire-box, I went into the deck-room, got an ax and did kill him." The dead man presented a horrible spectacle as he lay on the coal-pile with the top of his head literally dug out and the brains oozing from the ragged, ghastly wound. It sickened the beholders. An inquest was held and a verdict rendered in accordance with the foregoing facts. Mr. Bachman was an Odd Fellow, has relatives here, but no family, and was a quiet, inoffensive man. But little is known of Gibson, but he is a river man, and has been on the Fair Play about three weeks.

Few of our business men have been longer or more honorably connected with the trade of Vicksburg than our energetic, enterprising and accommodating friend, Joe Podesta, whose confectionery establishment has a name and fame that extend throughout this entire section. He always has a full stock, but in preparation for this holiday season, has surpassed himself in the amount and variety of his toys, fruits, candies, canned goods, fire-works, etc., and in the low price at which he sells them. As one item, we may mention that he lately received 5,000 pounds fancy candies, which he can sell away down below New Orleans prices, and his other goods are equally as low. His wholesale liquor and tobacco house, on Crawford street, is chock full of all grades of foreign and domestic liquors, tobaccos, and cigars, which he holds at prices that defy competition. If you want something nice for Christmas, or for any other purpose, call on Joe Podesta, and our word for it, he will treat you right and send you on your way rejoicing.

Andrew Johnson, it is said, preserved all his papers, and died leaving them in the upper story of a shop in Greenville. Throughout his life he carefully saved all papers, and even took to Greenville complete files of three daily newspapers of New York, covering his Presidential term. Of telegrams alone he must have left more than a bushel in a compact form. He saved them all; none were considered of so little importance as not to be worth saving. He remarked once how little space a folded letter took up, and what small trouble to save them, and how important they sometimes became.

The London Times says of Stanley's narrative of his explorations: "In this marvellous story there will be points to criticise, possibly mistakes to be noticed for future warning, and uncertainties still to be cleared up; but the grand result is unmistakable, and deserves all the honor that can be rendered to it."

Ex-Gov. Wm. Allen, of Ohio, prints a card saying: "I am not a candidate for the United States Senate, nor will I become a candidate in any contingency that may arise. If I were a member of the Legislature I should vote for General Morgan.

Pratt's Improved

REVOLVING HEAD COTTON GIN.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4.50 Per Saw.

THIS GIN HAS BEEN IN USE FOR the past four seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton-box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a larger yield of lint from the same amount of seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft, and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work within the same time, while economizing steam or animal power, than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased, producing cotton on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every one hundred bales ginned.
