BATCHELOR'S TRIAL.

Defendant Takes the Stand in His Own Behalf and Gives Details.

The Cross-Examination Was Still Under When the United States Court Adjourned.

HELENA, April 20.—H. F. Batchelor, the defendant, was the only witness on the stand in the United States court yesterday, and his examination was not concluded at adjournment. Under questions of his counsel he went over in detail the history of his connection with the bank, explained the understanding between himself and Stebbins as to the stock transactions; read the letter from Stebbins received by him, announcing the desire by London people to purchase the control of the bank; said that he and the other directors felt that it would be an advantage to get Stebbins out of the bank on account of his uncertain financial condition, and stated that deposits had fallen from $175,000 down to $45,000, which he believed to be due to Stebbins' connection with the bank. He said that deposits had increased from $75,000 to $350,000 in 1892. He had always expected to pay the notes that he had given to the bank at maturity, or as soon thereafter as he could obtain the money to do so. While had taken the money from the bank to send the $3,250 draft for the Billings estate stock, he had before deposited the proceeds of a loan made with the National Bank of the Republic in an amount greater than the payment made. As to the entries in the bills receivable register, the history of the note would be written by one person and the time of payment by another. As to the Merrill endorsement on the $4,700 note, he had probably neglected to make the endorsement when he originally entered it. He only had charge of the collection register, stock books and record books, and the entries made in the other books would be merely to aid the bookkeeper.

Concerning the reduced interest upon his notes witness said he conceived the idea that the idea that it was no more than right, in view of the fact of what he was doing for the bank and the long time he would have to carry these notes, that he should get it at 6 per cent. On July 5, 1893, when he gave his personal note for part of his father's debt the security was not changed at all. As to the Logan notes, he stated that the original notes had been sent to Major Logan for signature, and returned. He knew this by the creases upon them; he had written several letters and could get no reply, and the entries were made in the book for the purpose of cleaning up the old paper. It made an apparent difference of $602.48 in the undivided profit account, but the only actual loss to the bank was $23. He said there was no deception and claimed that the notes showed just what they were. He gave similar testimony as to the Burleigh items. He explained the election expense proposition as had the witness E. E. Batchelor; claimed that the property of the Miles City Water and Electric Light company was worth $50,000, and that the bank was secured by mortgage. He explained the Selway note transactions in accordance with his letter to E. W. Knight Jr., receiver, heretofore read in evidence, giving additional details. Witness denied the statement testified to by Examiner Wilson that he had drawn out of the bank everything in sight on his and his father's name. "It isn't likely that a man under indictment would make such a statement," he said. "Never mind about that, Mr. Batchelor," said Judge Cullen, one of his counsel.

Continuing, witness said he had arranged for a sale to Johnson before he purchased the Clowry stock. He claimed the Clowry stock. He claimed that the directors knew all about his business, and said that at the time of the purchase of the stock he had no intention of using the bank's money. Witness spoke of the meetings of the discount committee, and read extracts from the minutes to show that his action was always approved.

On cross-examination witness admitted that the entry of the note on September 16th and the transfer of the stock as of August 2d would tend to separate the transactions and make them appear distinct; and said that he could not remember whether he bought the stock from Wiley or not. After examining the daily deposit balance book he read the daily balances for the months in the year 1890 up to and inclusive of September, after its purchase, showing that all the deposits had ranged about the same, being about $9,000. He gave the total amount of stock payments to Stebbins, principal and interest, as upwards of $25,000. Defendant read the balance of the letter to Stebbins, of which a part was read in the morning, showing that he considered himself under deep obligations to Stebbins for patience in collecting. He stated the amount of stock that was outstanding at 160 shares, and admitted that the notes given on June 11th by his father were mere accommodation paper to take up his own paper in the bank, as his indebtedness was growing very large.

The cross-examination was not completed when the court adjourned until 10 a. m. to-day.

George Eliot and the Gypsy.

I never detected in her any trace of genial humor, though I doubt not that it was latent in her, and I thought her a person who had drawn her ideas far more from books and an acquaintance with certain types of humanity whom she had set herself deliberately to study—albeit with rare perception—than from an easy intuitive familiarity with all sorts and conditions of men. But she worked out thoroughly what she knew by the intuition of genius, though in this she was very far inferior to Scott. Thus she wrote the "Spanish Gypsy," having only seen such gypsies two or three times.

One day she told me that in order to write "Daniel Deronda" she had read through 200 books. I longed to tell her she had better have learned Yiddish and talked with 200 Jews and been taught, as I was by my friend Solomon the Sadducee, the art of distinguishing Fraulein Lowenthal of the Ashkenazim from Senorita Aguado of the Sephardim by the corners of their eyes. — "Memoir of Charles Godfrey Leland."

Music In War.

A minister in Little Rock has denied that the south was defeated because the strains of "Yankee Doodle" were more inspiring than the music of "Dixie." In point of fact, "Dixie" had and has every advantage, musically and sentimentally. "Yankee Doodle" was conceived many years ago in a spirit of derision and has never lost its burlesque quality. It is a lively tune, well adapted to marching purposes, but when there is serious business on hand and it is necessary to stir up patriotism "Yankee Doodle" isn't much of a motor. "Glory, Glory, Halleluiah!" has won a dozen great battles where "Yankee Doodle" gained a skirmish.—Kansas City Star.

Shocked the Judge.

Mme. Ella Zuila, as a performer on the high rope, has stood well up in her profession for years. An amusing incident in her career happened at Louisville in 1879. One of the items in her exhibition consisted of wheeling a child across the rope in a wheelbarrow. Judge Wakefield personally attended to stop this feat. On his arrival he was quite indignant to see Ella Zuila in midair, with the barrow laden as usual. After a moment's hesitation the fair performer tipped the barrow, and its occupant fell to the ground with a crash, to the great consternation of the judge. He cooled considerably when he found it was only a dressed up doll.

The Cattle Business.

Solomon is credited with saying "there is nothing new under the sun;" and a striking proof that human nature in all ages has been about the same is the fact that from the erliest time man has devoted a great deal of attention to herds of cattle. To go no further back than the patriarchs, we find that Abraham was a big cattleman, and on one occasion, when some heathen "rustlers" cut out a bunch of cattle from his herds, he mustered three hundred and eighteen of his cowboys, recovered the steers and hung the thieves. His herd must have been a big one to need so many cowboys. In the old days cattle were about the only portable wealth, and the chief means of barter. The first metal money was stamped with the figure of an ox, and our word "pecuniary" comes from "pecus," a herd of cattle. In the United States, Montana, Wyoming, Kansas and Texas are the homes of the great herds of cattle. Since 1866 the Chicago stock yards have received forty million head of cattle (besides other stock) and St. Louis and Kansas City as many more. The application of the above is that the Burlington Route has these cities as terminal points, has carried a much larger percentage of cattle than any of its competitors, and that if you want to see where cattle are congregated for sale, you should take the Burlington Route; or if you wish to visit the immense range of prairie, valley and mountain side where you see these million pastured, the best road is the Burlington Route. For business or for pleasure it has no equal, and all desired information as to rates or routes will be given by any of its agents, or on application to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

This Time Last Year.

For the convenience of those who wish to make comparisons and for the benefit of others who can never remember, the JOURNAL will hereafter keep standing a table of the corresponding month of last year, showing day by day the principal meteorological conditions, as obtained from the record kept by the United States weather observer in this city. In the Spring

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come, and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious disease. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. We ask you to give this medicine a trial. We are sure it will do you good. Read the testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people. They tell the story

Petroleum.

"The value of petroleum to the arts and sciences is simply incalculable," said Walter Francis, a gentleman who knows all about oil. "Of course every one is familiar with the chemicals that are separated from the liquid in the course of its refinement, but how few know that most of the carbon used in electric lights comes from the same source, or rather from the action it exerts upon metal. Yes, sir, the edges of the pots in which crude petroleum is refined are now chipped off and sold to the electric companies, as the action of the intense heat upon the mixture has the effect of forming almost pure carbon on the rims."—Detroit News.
