

COUNCIL BLUFFS. The Local Budget From Across the River. Mourning for James Abram Garfield. In Respect to His Memory the Supreme Court Adjourns Sine Die.

The Bluffs in Brief

TOKENS OF RESPECT TO THE MEMORY OF THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

Had the casket containing the remains of our lamented president been borne up the court house steps and placed between the bench and bar, no more deep sense of sympathy and mourning would have pervaded the room than there did yesterday. The supreme court judges entered sadly, and instead of taking their places behind the bench, passed into one of the ante-rooms. A deep gloom was depicted on every countenance there assembled. Promptly at 10 o'clock Attorney General McPherson came out of the room, and passing up the aisle, stopped upon the platform and in solemn tones reported that the judges awaited the action of the bar.

Major Lyman moved that the meeting be made a special one and that the attorney general be called upon to preside.

Mr. McPherson in a very brief speech took the chair and calling the meeting to order announced that it was for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the different members as to the propriety of adjourning the court.

Mr. C. R. Scott arose and in a few timely words offered the following: "Resolved, By the attorneys in attendance upon the present term of the supreme court that it is fitting and right that as a mark of respect for the memory of our lamented president that this court ought to adjourn sine die."

Mr. Scott said he would like to hear the views of attorneys from adjoining counties, as they would be more uninfluenced than those from Pottawatomie county.

Mr. Strom, of Red Oak, opposed the resolution. He said the action of the members of the bar would only be formal. An adjournment of two days would show the same degree of respect as an adjournment that would delay the business of the court for six months.

He moved an amendment to Mr. Scott's resolution that when the court adjourns it adjourn until Thursday. Mr. Scott said there was no knowing what the people of this country might be called upon to do in the next ten days. The funeral obsequies would undoubtedly occupy the entire present term of the court, and he believed that the court should adjourn without delay.

Mr. McHenry, of Des Moines, said he felt under the circumstances disinclined to wait upon his business at this term before this court. He would not have the heart and could not do his client's justice, Mr. Russell, of Corning, spoke in opposition to Mr. Scott's resolution. He said there was no member of the bar who entertained more respect for the memory of the dead president than he, and he knew that each member of the bar was bowed down with the most solemn and profound grief.

Yet he thought after an adjournment for two days, the business, out of justice to clients, should be resumed. Mr. Wright being called upon, spoke briefly in favor of the resolution.

Mr. McPherson said in view of the great calamity that had befallen the nation, the question of an adjournment of the court ought to be considered debatable for a single moment. Mr. Smith of Logan favored an adjournment over the term, Col. W. P. Heppburn spoke in behalf of Mr. Scott's resolution. He said that the supreme court was the only representative body of the state at the present time in active operation.

It set upon this solemn occasion would be considered the act of the people of Iowa. A vote was then taken on Mr. Scott's resolution which prevailed. Mr. McHenry moved that the attorney general be appointed a special messenger to announce the voice of the meeting to the judges in the adjoining room. On hearing the action the bar had taken the judges came out of the ante-room and with a solemn step took their places behind the bench.

Austin Adams, the chief justice, ordered court to be opened. A solemn stillness prevailed when Mr. McPherson read the resolution, accompanying the same with a few brief remarks. Mr. McPherson said: The tolling of the bells last night fell sadly on the ear, and the mourning dress of the newspapers this morning admonished us that Garfield had died. We have been led to believe for some time that we would never be called upon to drink from such a bitter cup. Such a calamity would never be dealt out to this people. To-day the nation is bowed down with grief. Garfield has been stricken down by the assassin's fell hand—a man without an equal in scholarship, a statesman without a peer.

When Abraham Lincoln was taken, a loyal north was bowed down with grief. To-day the nation touches the hearts of fifty million united people. It is time for us to stop and consider what our duties are. Two presidents within the memory of the boys, even have been thus stricken down by the hand of the assassin. It is time the people of this nation understood whether lawlessness and communism of peace and good order is to control this nation. Mr. Scott, in seconding the resolution, said: "James A. Garfield has fallen. The nation to-day, regardless of party, is in mourning. Our great, our good and beloved president has been struck down. Well I remember seeing President Garfield in that vast amphitheater during the national convention that nominated him. The presence of the man moved me when he entered and took a place in that vast throng.

There seemed something about him that electrified the multitude there assembled. The thought then came up in my mind as never before that God created man in his own image, and I believe if ever there was a man created in the image of his maker that man was James A. Garfield. His mission in that convention seemed to be to point out on the troubled waters. He was there as a peace maker, and as such he acted. He believed that the news which informed him of his nomination awoke a thought in his mind that with him all would not be well. He seemed to have a presentiment then and there that a shadow was around about him."

Col. Sapp spoke as follows: "I do not feel that I am doing my duty were I to remain silent on this most solemn occasion. It was my good fortune to be personally, and I may say intimately, acquainted with James A. Garfield, and I can say here in truth to know him was to love him. He was among the foremost; beloved even by his political opponents; a noble, generous, large hearted man of broad intellect; a man not only of great kindness of heart but endowed with extraordinary genius. He had no equal in debate, of so kind and generous a nature entirely void of malice. That he could always find something to praise in the acts of others, and, indeed, should the whole country, ay, more, the whole world mourn deeply, that such a light as his has been so suddenly extinguished. At the conclusion of Col. Sapp's remarks, Hon. Austin Adams, chief justice, addressed the bar in behalf of the court. Mr. Adams said: "On the death of President Garfield, no one of us has ever listened to a more solemn sound than the tolling of the bells last night announcing in language which none of us misunderstood, the great calamity which has befallen us. No official was ever so deeply stricken by the death of its ruler, because no ruler ever died under circumstances so peculiarly aggravating. At a time of profound peace and national security, at a time when no one questioned a single principle upon which the government is founded, a president of acknowledged ability and purity of character, exemplary and honorable citizenship, was stricken down by the hand of an assassin. After his many weeks of suffering the sad event so painfully apprehended from the beginning has finally transpired. The nation bows to-day in heartfelt sorrow. We mourn not simply the loss of a great statesman, the foremost representative of human progress and human liberty, but we mourn the loss of his official position. We have been brought to a painful realization, that no nobleness of character, no past or prospective usefulness and no retrenchment in the hearts of a devoted people can shield the president of the United States against the assassin's bullet. We do not yet know precisely what the lesson is which God has designed to teach us. Possibly it is that we should put our ultimate faith in a human instrumentality. Under the blessing of God, doubtless the nation will prove greater than all presidents. Our hearts are too full to attend to any ordinary vocation. This court, therefore, will stand adjourned for the time, and it is ordered that the resolutions passed be made part of the record."

FATHER McMENOMY'S VISITOR. During the holding of missionary services at Father McMenomy's Monday night this reverend gentleman, on stepping to the door, noticed a basket about the size of a common grape basket, on the steps. Supposing that some one had temporarily placed a basket of grapes there and would soon return after them, he took no further notice of the circumstance until he remembered that a friend had promised to fetch him a little puppy. Thinking, possibly, that such was the true solution of the basket mystery, he again stepped to the door, brought the basket, and placing his hand inside, he felt hair. He smiled, as Father Mac is wont to smile, and said his pup had come at last. He carried the basket to the light for a more close inspection when to his utter amazement he found, instead of a pup, snugly tucked away in the basket, what proved to be a helpless little visitor.

It was a male child, naked, as it came into the world, and as Dr. Hart stated when he saw it only a day old. The mother or father, who ever it was that left the babe, could not have left it in better hands, for Father Mac, remembering that Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Martin had lost the only little one they had recently, immediately turned the way over to them, they promising to take care of it to their full satisfaction of Father McMenomy.

THE BLUFFS IN BRIEF. An alarm of fire was sent in from box 1 Monday morning about 3 o'clock. The fire department turned out in full force, when it was found a small stable on avenue P was in flames. It was entirely consumed, but not much damage was done. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is supposed to be the work of carelessness in lighting a pipe or cigar.

Our city was indeed dressed in deep mourning yesterday. All along the principal streets, doors and windows and cornices were hung in black. The First National office, and Pusey's and the Council Bluffs saving banks were all trimmed with black crepe, as was also the following buildings on Broadway: Chamberlain's meat market, Barney Grahl's tin shop, Wicas & Clauson, R. Mullis, Geo. F. Smith, A. S. Bonham, Bell & Hall, T. J. Clark, H. C. Hanson, E. Huntington, City meat market, John Lee, T. J. Osborn, J. L. Foreman, Schofield & Cavin, Mrs. Pfeiffer, Mrs. Lee, B. S. Dawson, Dawson's meat market, U. S. Express company's office, Pacific house, P. C. De Vol, Oberfelder, Newman's pool line, K. C. ticket office, A. Louies, Foster Bros., Nonpareil building, Derksen's barber shop, Knox & Taylor, Revere house, Morrison's arcade, Central beer hall, J. M. Phillips, Porterfield & Church, Dowling & Co., H. H. Judson, Metcalf Bros., L. T. Lindsey, Mathys, J. B. Davidson, H. E. Seaman, Keller's furniture store, Crookwell & Co., Erb & Daquets, J. B. Atkins, Keller & Morgan, Stanbeck & Davis' barn, Alex's saloon, Mrs. Booth's, the pawnshop, Lee's barber shop, Woolsey's restaurant, Mrs. Hardin's, Exchange saloon, Herzman's dry goods store, Charley's barber shop, John Epeneter, M. J. O'Neal, Bechtel's hotel, C. J. Beckman's, Maurer & Craig, J. B. Laing, Robinson Bros., Henry Eisenman, L. Kirsch, Harkness, Orcutt & Co.'s store was very tastefully decorated, in one of the windows was displayed a large chromo of the deceased president, draped in deep mourning, very prettily. The frame of the picture was hung in crepe, curtained up with white ribbon. In the front window of the city building was a picture of the deceased, decorated in about the same fashion, with this motto: "We mourn the loss of our president."

From the third story of the James block was also suspended a large portrait of our late president, draped in the same way. Several flags were stretched across the street draped in deep mourning. On Main street Smith & Crittenden, wholesale dry goods; Hayes & Gleason, Ed. Cook's saloon, M. Griffin, C. B. Jacquemin, E. D. F. Fisher, Loughton, Harry James, Wm. M. Bushel, A. H. Hazard, Newton's photographing rooms; Barke, photographer, displayed a flag trimmed with black crepe from one of his windows. The decoration on the city building was executed by Justice Abbott; that on Odd Fellows hall by Nash & Dawson. The Globe office, on Pearl street; also Bamham & Talley's were likewise draped. In fact, all our principal streets evidenced where the thought and sympathy of the people of Council Bluffs were directed yesterday.

Franks Evans shipped a large quantity of corn to Chicago, and what is known as rejected sold for sixty-one cents.

It is said that two of our well known citizens but a suit of clothing on the life or death of Garfield. The following business was transacted by the board of trade Monday evening: T. J. Hart made the following report: "We, the undersigned, committee appointed to visit Des Moines during the state fair, for the purpose of arranging for the holding of the next annual meeting of the state agricultural society in Council Bluffs, reports as follows: We visited the state fair and had an interview with the officers of the state association and found they were in favor of removing the fair to some other locality than Des Moines. It was generally understood that a contract was existing between the society and Des Moines to hold their annual meetings at that point for a certain number of years. We found this to be untrue. No such contract has ever existed. That the time and place of holding the annual meeting was decided each year in January by the board of directors appointed by the different agricultural associations in the state, and after it was located it was customary to let it remain two years. That we are fully satisfied that with proper effort and the assistance of the citizens of Council Bluffs the next meeting of the society can be secured to Council Bluffs, and we would recommend that a mass meeting be called in the near future for the purpose of devising means for securing the necessary aid, at which time a more complete and detailed report will be given. In motion of C. R. Scott the following citizens' committee was appointed to look after the matters connected with the proceedings of the state fair at this point: E. E. Harkness, W. J. Davenport, Conrad Giese, John Dohany and T. B. Galt.

The following delegates were appointed to attend the Mississippi improvement convention at St. Louis on the 26th of October next: Hon. W. F. Sapp and Hon. L. C. Baldwin.

The board of trade building, the post-office on Main and Pearl streets, Wright & Baldwin's and S. T. Walker's were draped in mourning with the rest yesterday.

Wm. Cappy, of Avoca, who has recently returned from an extended trip into northern Iowa. He reports the corn crop in a flourishing condition.

Barlett & Cappy used corn instead of wood to burn brick this year in Walnut. Now rejected corn is worth 10 cents in Chicago.
