Use Dry Lime Sulfur

This material is the genuine liquid Lime and Sulphur dried by a patented process, taking out the 50 per cent or more of water, on which you have to pay freight.

It is not a substitute, such as many preparations put on the market under similar names. A can weighing 100 pounds of Dry Lime Sulphur is equal to a barrel of liquid Lime Sulphur weighing 600 pounds. It dissolves easily in water and is equally as effective as the liquid.

This has been on the market for several years, and has been thoroughly tested. We sold a large quantity of it last year, and our customers have expressed themselves as being very much pleased with it and thoroughly satisfied as to its effectiveness and economy in use. Two pounds of the Dry Lime Sulfur is equal to a gallon of the liquid.

This material is recommended for use the same as liquid lime sulphur to control the San Jose Scale, and should be applied any time during the winter or early spring before the buds begin to swell, using 10 to 14 pounds to 50 gallons of water. For bad cases of Scale we advise an application in the fall immediately after the leaves disappear, and in the early spring before the buds begin to swell.

For orchards that have no Scale it is advised to use this preparation in the dormant season to prevent Scale and to keep the trees in a healthy condition, as it is a preventative and cure for other forms of fungus diseases.

Taking the freight into consideration, you will find this preparation more economical than the liquid lime and sulphur and much more convenient to handle. Write for prices.
