SEEING FOOTBALL BY PROXY.

Blind Enthusiast in England Who Never Misses a Match When He Can Get There.

Blind when he was four years old, a well-known Blackburn (England) man is a self-taught musician, playing the piano and other instruments by ear and earning his living by that accomplishment. Many blind people, however, are musicians, and that is not the curious thing about Mike, says Golden Penny. His penchant is not only for music, but for football. If you ask him on a Saturday night where he has been in the afternoon, he will invariably tell you he has been to "see" a football match. A blind man going to see a football match—Nonsense! But it is not nonsense. Mike is so fond of football—especially of his own pet team, the Blackburn Rovers—that he never misses a match if he can possibly help it in the season, frequently traveling with the team to matches out of town—not for the purpose of playing music for coppers, as some may suppose; no, he goes purely and simply to "see the game."

True, he sees it by proxy. He stands among the crowd, and as the shout goes up and the remarks and criticisms of those about him are expressed, he can follow the game as keenly as any man, and when time is called he will tell you more about the details of the match than anyone else. Mike is proud of the fact that he has scarcely missed seeing a match on a Saturday afternoon for the last 20 years—to say nothing of extra games on other days.

HOW ERMINES ARE CAPTURED.

An Ingenious Method is Employed by the Trapper to Save the Fur from Harm.

Perfect fur, of the delicate ermine at least, would be marred by the ordinary snare, so the trapper devises a cunning death for the ermine, as the ermine devotes when it darts up through the snow with its spear teeth clutched in the throat of a poor rabbit, writes Agnes C. Laout, in Leslie's Monthly. Semaring his hunting knife with grease, he lays it across the track. The little ermine comes trotting in dots and dashes and gallops and dives to the knife. That greasy smell of meat it knows, but that frost-silvered bit of steel is something new. The knife is frosted like ice. Ice, the ermine has licked, so he licks the knife. But alas for the resemblance between ice and steel! Ice turns to water under the warm tongue; steel turns to fire that blisters and holds the foolish little stoat by his inquisitive tongue, a hopeless prisoner till the trapper comes. And, lest marauding wolverine or lynx should come first and gobble up priceless ermine, the trapper comes soon. And that is the end for the ermine.

MISFORTUNE OF AN HEIRESS.

The Owner of Arran Isle Misses Dual Title Because She Was Not Born a Boy.

The recent visit of King Edward to the Island of Arran, on the coast of Scotland, recalls the extraordinary luck of the present duke of Hamilton, and the misfortune of the owner of Arran in not being born a boy, observes the Chicago Record-Herald. The present duke succeeded to the title in the most roundabout way. He is descended from the fourth duke, and his line branched off in 1742 when Lord Anne Hamilton (who had been named after Queen Anne) married. The senior branch of the Hamiltons from the fifth to the twelfth dukes, after reigning 172 years, became extinct in the male line, leaving plain Alfred Douglas Hamilton the dukedom. The late duke, whose mother was a princess of Baden, and whose sister became princess of Monaco, left an only daughter, who is now 18. She owns almost the whole of Arran, which is one of the most beautiful spots in the United Kingdom and has not become vulgarized by holiday makers.

TO PRESERVE OUR FORESTS.

Clubwomen of Many States Are Interesting Themselves in the Work of Saving the Trees.

Clubwomen are working in many states for forest preservation. They have taken an active part in the agitation in Pennsylvania, which has resulted in the preservation of 700,000 acres of forest lands, placing that state at the head of all in this matter. The Woman's club at Wilkesbarre has been especially interested, securing the appointment of a forester to care for forests in the vicinity.

The Maine federation has a committee on forest preservation. Maryland and Delaware are trying to save their evergreens, of which the states are being denuded at Christmas time. Now Jersey wants to raise a fund of $100,000 for forestry parks along the palisades. Clubwomen of Wisconsin have planted hundreds of trees during the last few years. Minnesota women, says the Detroit Free Press, have labored unceasingly to secure a permanent forest reservation at the headwaters of the Mississippi.

The L. Lamb Lumber Co. has the only genuine American Steel Fence in Linton. It is just what you want, especially for hogs and sheep.
