CUT AND DRIED

PROBABLY WAS ELECTED

A banker ran for office in Montana and began his first campaign speech thus:

"I remember when this country was a howling wilderness."

He hesitated, coughed, hastily looked through his notes, took a drink of water and went on:

"I repeat, that I remember when this country was a howling wilderness."

Again he stopped, coughed, got red in the face and took another drink of water.

"Yes, yes, go on," yelled the crowd.

But the fact was he had completely forgotten his speech and had such a case of stage fright that he couldn't figure it out from his notes. He swallowed three or four more lumps and began again weakly:

"Let me again repeat, I remember when this country was a howling wilderness, and—"

His voice tapered off in a thin mutter and he again gagged and swallowed. The crowd began to snicker and someone yelled: "Then what do you remember?"

But suddenly his brow cleared and he smiled confidently. Stepping forward and sweeping the horizon with his arm like a veteran orator, he began again:

"I can remember when this country was a howling wilderness, and I wish to God it was yet!"

He bowed profoundly amid applause, stepped down from the platform and accepted the congratulations of his friends.

The "World's Series" being held between the Giants and Yanks will draw more crowds and get more newspaper space than the "World's Disarmament Series" which meets soon at Washington, D. C. This is a sad comment on our sense of values. So says a newspaper editor. But then, the baseball "World's Series" has a Babe Ruth and the "World's Disarmament Series" has no star players, due to President Harding's failure to appoint any as delegates.

CAUGHT A SUCKER

A city guy who had made some derogatory remarks about "rubes," was challenged as follows by a farmer.

"I'll make a bet with you that I can answer any question which I myself propose, but that you can not answer your own questions. First I will ask a question and if I can not answer it myself, you win. But if I do answer it, then you ask a question and try to answer it yourself. If you fail I win. We will take turns till one of us loses."

The city guy agreed.

"My first question," said the farmer, "is this: 'How did the rabbits dig those holes over there?'"

"That's your question; now answer it yourself," said the city guy.

"Easy," said the farmer. "They dug them from the bottom up."

"Haw, haw, haw," laughed the city guy. "How, in that case, did they get to the bottom of the holes in the first place?"

"That's your question," said the farmer. "Now answer it yourself."
