VIII—SCORING—SCORE CARD

Winning Hand Bonus Scores

For Mah-Jong (completed hand) .....	20
For no sequences in hand or on table .....	10
For no other score than Mah-Jong in hand or on table....	10
For winning on a draw from the loose tiles .....	10
For drawing the winning piece .....	2
For filling in the only place to win .....	2

Combination Scores

	On table (Ex-posed) Points	In hand (Con-cealed) Points
For 3 of a kind of twos, threes, fours, fives, sixes, sevens or eights .....	2	4
For 3 of a kind of ones, nines, winds or dragons .....	4	8
For 4 of a kind of twos, threes, fours, fives, sixes, sevens or eights .....	8	16
For 4 of a kind of ones, nines, winds or dragons .....	16	32
For a pair of any dragon or the player's own wind .....		2

Doubling Honors

For three (or four) green dragons, double total score once.
 For three (or four) red dragons, double total score once.
 For three (or four) white dragons, double total score once.
 For three (or four) of own wind, double total score once.
 For having all one suit except honor pieces, double total score once.
 For all honor pieces, double total score three times.
 For winning on original hand as drawn from the wall, double total score three times.
 It will be seen at a glance that the scoring values are divided into three parts. First, the bonus scores, which apply only to the winner's hand; finally, the doubling honors, which apply to all four hands. In settling the scores the winner starts at the top with twenty points for "Mah-Jong" or for winning and goes down the list scoring ten points, if he has no sequence in his hand, and so on through the bonus scores; add to these whatever scores he obtains from combinations in his hand or on the table, and doubling the sum as many times as he has doubling honors.

In the bonus scores for the winning hand only there are six items:

1. "Mah-Jong," which gives 20 points for completing the hand.
2. No sequence in hand or on table. This is a bonus of 10 points given to a player if he wins with a hand which contains no sequences.
3. Drawing the winning piece. This is a bonus of 2 points given to the winning player if he draws the tile which completes his hand from the wall. Of course, punting the winning tile will forfeit this bonus.
4. Filling the only place to win. This is a bonus of 2 points given to a player who fills the only possible place to win, i. e., to win by matching the pair or by drawing the middle tile of a sequence.
5. Winning on a draw from a loose tile. This, of course, is a bonus of ten points given to the winning player if by a loose tile draw he has been fortunate enough to complete his hand.

6. No other score than "Mah-Jong" in hand or on table. This is a bonus of ten points given to the winning player having only 20 points for "Mah-Jong" as his score, and is a hand made up of four sequences and a pair in which there is no score, a sequence having no scoring value whatsoever. Of course, even drawing the winning piece will forfeit this bonus.

In the combination scores exposed sets are those on the table face up to the right of the player; concealed sets are those which are in his hand at the time of winning. As will be seen by the score card, concealed sets having been made up by the player without the assistance of a pung or chow score twice as much as the same set would if it were on the table. This, together with the fact that sets of ones, nines, winds or dragons score twice as much as sets of twos, threes, fours, fives, sixes, sevens and eights, should be helpful in memorizing the score, which is essential to the careful playing of each hand.

As for the doubling honors, each set or combination doubles the total score once, and if there are five doubling honors in a hand, the total score should be doubled five times. For example: A player goes Mah-Jong or Mah-Diao, having 32 points in bonus scores, 18 in combination scores, making his total score 50. Then if he has five doubling honors his final score is 1,600 points, i. e., 50-100-200-400-800-1,600.
