The work of putting the steel roof trusses of the Elks' new club house progressed rapidly yesterday and today and as soon as they are in place the work on the building will be pushed without delay. The steel got stuck in the storms in Kansas and was lost several days. It did not arrive in Las Vegas until Saturday night. As soon as the trusses are set the work on the roof can begin. The building is lathed as far as possible and much of the plumbing and heating pipe lines are in place. As soon as the roof is on and the building enclosed the plastering will begin and the structure rushed to a rapid completion.
