U. S. MAY BUILD WAR MOTORCARS

Armored Autos Provided For In Anthony's Bill.

PROVE EFFECTIVE IN EUROPE

Congressman insists That This Country Cannot Afford to Overlook Value of New Engines of Warfare—Would Be Big Protection to Our Forces and Destructive to Enemy.

Washington—The general use of armored motorcars for war purposes in Europe and the valuable services that they are rendering have gripped the imagination of some congressmen. Representative D. R. Anthony of Kansas of the committee on military affairs said that he would introduce a bill for the purchase of armored automobiles for the United States army. Sentiment in favor of Mr. Anthony's proposal is said to have developed among other members of the military committee, and around the capital there is a considerable feeling that this government cannot afford to be without this unit of war equipment.

"To my mind," said Representative Anthony, "there can be no doubt that any up to date army must be equipped with armored automobiles. The things that have been accomplished through their use in Europe have demonstrated that as engines of modern warfare they are indispensable. This is strikingly so in connection with all cavalry movements. Nobody can question the advantage of having fast moving vehicles which can carry fighting men and keep them impregnable to rifle fire."

"I understand that one of the arguments against the use of these cars in the United States is that our terrain, the lay of the land, is not suitable for their use. This, it seems to me, is an untenable objection. The country over the terrain of the United States does offer more obstacles than that of Europe because the present battlefields of Europe are a network of improved highways. But there are many areas where hostilities might take place in this country that are exactly suited to the use of the automobile."

"It must be remembered that an armored car is not the ordinary touring car. It is not built, for instance, with pneumatic tires, and it can traverse open and rough country with facility. It can even go through the panel of a fence without being stopped, and it can do away with the efficiency of barbed wire fences, obstructions which our American troops encountered with such fatality in the Spanish war.

"Properly equipped with a sufficient ly low speed, the cars could climb steep hills, offering absolute protection to their occupants from rifle fire and ordinary machine gun shots, thus accomplishing a movement which would be impossible to cavalry and at the same time throwing a deadly fusillade into the enemy."

"As life saving devices the armored automobiles seem to me to be the greatest war invention we have had for some time. In an armored car four men can be transported at a high rate of speed to the point from which the attack seems to be made and can handle their rapid fire machine guns with practically no danger from hostile fire. It does not require much imagination to realize with what deadly efficiency 100 or 200 of these cars could operate against the enemy. They would be of prime importance in protecting a retreat, because they can be constructed so that their fire can be directed from either front or rear, and being armored, they would form a sort of moving fortification a screen behind which the retreating troops could operate."

"The time may soon come when much of the military work done by the horse will be accomplished through the instrumentality of the armored car, for armored cars can pull greater weights than can horses and can hold positions which would be impossible for cavalry. When this time does arrive it would be a great mistake to have this country behind all others in such valuable and essential equipment."

THE CHURCH'S ORDINATION. Matthew 28:16-20; Luke 24:36-49.

"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."—Matthew 28:20.

TODAY'S Study relates to the commission, or authorization of service, which Jesus appointed to His Church during the forty days subsequent to His resurrection. First, we have His words in the upper room at Jerusalem, and then a part of the general commission given just before His ascension.

The Evangelist sums up in a few words a Scriptural exposition which probably occupied at least an hour. Probably our Lord explained to them the significance of the Passover—that He was the Antitype of the lamb killed at that time; and that the first-born, subsequently represented in the tribe of Levi, applied the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in Heaven. All the saintly followers of Jesus will eventually be either of the Royal Priesthood or of the antitypical Levites, their servants, in the work of the world's blessing during Messiah's Kingdom.

Doubtless the Master also gave suggestions respecting the antitypical Atonement Day and the better sacrifices—that He Himself began these sacrifices, which would be continued in His disciples; and that after these sacrifices were finished, the Atonement blessings would go forth from the High Priest to all mankind.

Whatever features of the Divine Plan the Master unfolded, we have the assurance that His auditors were deeply interested. They saw heights, depths, lengths and breadths of which they had never dreamed. They saw that Jesus' death was necessary for the carrying out of the hopes inspired by God's promises; and that they themselves were privileged, not only to suffer with Him, but also to be glorified.

The Holy Spirit Promised.

The Master's concluding words on that occasion were: "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you." In various types the Father had promised that the Church would receive the Holy Spirit from Jesus, their Head. This was typified in the holy oil which, poured upon Aaron's head, flowed down upon his body. This evidence of the Divine acceptance was all-important.

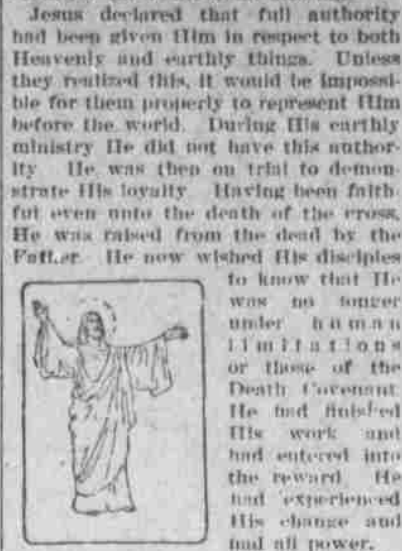

Without it the disciples would have had no commission and could not be ambassadors for God. Jesus indeed had sent out the Twelve and afterward the Seventy; but they were His representatives, and He had given them of His own spirit, or power, by which they had worked miracles, etc. But they never had been recognized of the Father. They must wait for the begetting and anointing of the Spirit, which alone could qualify them to be God's representatives.

"Lo, I Am With You Alway." St. Matthew's account of our Lord's commissioning of His disciples to declare His Message is full of interest. By appointment the Eleven met Him in a mountain in Galilee. For a few moments only did they appear to them. They worshipped, were fully convinced, others were not. It was to convince such as these that Jesus remained during His forty days. We are sure that He fully accomplished His work of convincing the Eleven; for they were all of one heart and mind when they waited in the upper room for the Pentecostal blessing. Jesus declared that full authority had been given Him in respect to both Heavenly and earthly things. Unless they realized this, it would be impossible for them properly to represent Him before the world. During His earthly ministry He did not have this authority. He was then on trial to demonstrate His loyalty. Having been faithful even unto the death of the cross, He was raised from the dead by the Father. He now wished His disciples to know that He was no longer under a human limitation of those of the Death Covenant. He had finished His work and had entered into the reward. He had experienced His change and had all power.

Primarily His commission that the disciples go and teach belonged only to the Eleven, but subsequently it included St. Paul, who took the place of Judas. The Apostles alone are authorized as mouthpieces of the Lord Jesus Christ and His Church. To them was given the great work of inaugurating the Church. The Lord has arranged, however, that each member of the Church should be His representative, and have a share in proclaiming the Gospel Message in proportion to his opportunity and ability. Whoever receives the begetting and anointing of the Holy Spirit is included in the statement of Paul at 1:1-3, as a member of the Body of Christ.

Thus we see our commission as respects all who have an ear to hear our Message. We are to make them disciples, to immerse them in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, and to teach them to observe all things whatsoever Jesus commands. This is the extent of our authority. God will do the rest.

THE ELM TREE. The burls of logs from the settler's elm. The last of its timber—they couldn't sell 'em. Never an ax has seen their chips. And the wedges flew from between their lips. Their blunt ends frizzled like celery tips. —Holmes. "If that fair elm," he cried, "alone should stand, No grapes would glow with gold and tempt the hand Or if that vine without her elm should grow 'Twould creep, a poor neglected shrub below." —Ovid.

PANGGANGS OF MALAY. Ruled by an Old Witch, They Are the Quickest People Known. Ruled by a great enchantress and having no form of money, the Panggangs, a tribe in a mountainous jungle in the northern part of the Malay peninsula, is one of the queerest known to white men. The tribesmen are of a negroid type, whose social organization is that of a simple form of commonwealth and who are nomadic, wandering about from place to place in their dense jungles and forests. Among them dwells a woman whose strange characteristics are strongly reminiscent of Haggard's famous "She." The woman is supposed to be a great enchantress. She is held in dread by the Panggangs. She lives alone in a bamboo hut, shaded by the leaves of the sacred ubang tree. Food is brought her daily by the oldest man or woman of the tribe. The Panggangs are said to be a peaceable and honest people, and do not, among themselves, either fight or steal. They literally have no use for money for trading purposes, but if by chance they get money they bury it, so that they may use it in trading after death. After getting a supply of food, they do no work whatever until the supply is ended. They eat any wild creature.

CHRISTENED IN AEROPLANE. Chicago Youngster Named Ariel While 1,000 Feet Up. Chicago.—Miss Ariel Vilas, who has attained the dignity of four weeks, enjoys the distinction of being the first "aeroplane baby." She was christened at a distance of approximately a thousand feet from the earth and gurgled with delight over the sensation of having a name bestowed upon her while soaring like a bird, with her father at the wheel. Ariel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vilas. They conceived the original idea of christening their first born in the air.
