We got our notes in on Thursday last week. This has been usually early enough to insure their appearance, but we didn't count on matrimony interfering. Funny what a difference, eh? Why, that editor got the paper out a day ahead of the usual time, which, of course, cut out the Sunnyside notes. We wouldn't have been surprised to have had no paper at all last week—but a day ahead! If the new combination works like this right along, we ranchers will sure have to get up before breakfast. Hearty congratulations from us all, Mr. Editor and wife.
