

NAVAL CADETS ARE GENUINE SNOBS ACCORDING TO REPORTS

Member of Congress Will Enquire Into Social Ethics of Academy as Result of Snub to Pretty Governess.

HAZING IS NO EVIL COMPARED TO LATEST

Washington, May 1.—The snobbery said to exist in the United States Naval academy at Annapolis seems destined to feel the heavy hand of a congressional investigation. There are some members of congress who feel that snobbery should go for as having its gone, "for the good of the service."

Representative Korbly, a Democratic member of the house from Indiana, is the instigator of the plan to turn the searchlight of publicity and official inquiry upon the peculiar social conditions existing at the naval academy. He is both determined and indignant, and this feeling grows because of the recent Beers incident, regarded as purely social at first, but now assuming national importance.

The question that congress may eventually decide is this: "Is a working girl out of place at a naval hospital, and what is there about her that makes her 'unfit' to grace a social function participated in by the future captains and admirals of the navy?"

A wave of general indignation extended throughout the country when it became known that Miss Mary Beers, a governess in an officer's household and a companion of the officer's wife, had been snubbed by one of the officers at an establishment maintained by the United States government.

Miss Beers, the daughter of a professor of English at Yale university, talented, accomplished, the social equal of all with whom she danced, and perhaps a bit better than many of them, had been a welcome guest at the hops. Her beauty and vivaciousness made her a general favorite.

Then there came upon the scene a fastidious young officer. Calling Miss Beers' escort to one side, he rather brusquely hinted that the escort would do well not to bring Miss Beers to future hops, indicating that her presence was not desired because she was presumed to be a working girl.

The story leaked out, despite the usual effort to keep such affairs secret. Representative Korbly, with the endorsement of other members of the house, asked for an explanation of such proceedings upon a resolution belonging to a supposedly democratic form of government.

"Since when," enquired Mr. Korbly in substance, "have the young men sent to Annapolis, practical wards of the government, become so exclusive and importunate that it is impossible for them to associate with a young woman who, because she so desires, or because it is necessary, accepts honorable employment?"

"There was much unwinding of red tape at the navy department. Secretary Meyer has now answered Mr. Korbly's query, but instead of the navy department only aggravates its seriousness.

"The affair grew out of a misunderstanding of the status of the young lady," writes the secretary of the navy. The department has directed that Captain Bowser, superintendent of the academy address a letter of apology to Mr. Beers and his daughter.

"A misunderstanding of the status of the young lady is not the sort of explanation that the Indiana congressman or other members of congress will want. What is the 'status' to which the secretary refers, was the instant question. The official note of explanation has but strengthened the belief that there exists a system of snobbery at the academy, and that everything is based on 'status' as defined by the self-styled exclusive set.

It required several years before congress, with the aid of firm executives stopped hazing at Annapolis and West Point. The impression in some quarters today is that snobbery is now just as strongly entrenched at Annapolis as the habit used to be of hazing, and that its effect upon the service is worse.

Hazing, it will be pointed out, when the matter is brought to the official attention of the house, was something that grew out of the inherent disposition of the young men to be mischievous snobbery, suffering by comparison will be pardoned as something that is not tolerated except by the pig, and that should not be tolerated at an institution maintained on public funds.

Representative Korbly has received

A letter from former Attorney General Miller, who served under the Harrison administration, in which Mr. Miller declares that no snobbery should be spent for the maintenance of the naval academy until those responsible for the Beers incident have been sent to sea and finally executed that such occurrences will not reoccur.

Mr. Korbly was informed that he is disappointed with the reply of the navy department, which he regards as an open avowal of the snobbery of the academy. He has written a second letter to Secretary Meyer and several other officers, that unless some more satisfactory explanation is given he will push a probe into the so-called social life of Annapolis.

There are many members of the house who are in line with Mr. Korbly. Young men from all sections of the country are sent to Annapolis by members of congress, and it is upon the recommendation of the lawmakers that candidates are given an opportunity to enter the service and to be the foundation for a possible distinguished career in the navy. One of the impressions set abroad that Annapolis is the hotbed of snobbery, among the average member of congress, and much of its value as an institution of higher learning is gone.

Many of the young men sent to Annapolis come from poor families. Some of them have sisters who work, and it is no fact that has caused Mr. Korbly to ask indignantly.

"What are the peculiar social conditions at Annapolis that snub a governess and a young woman, a governess in an officer's home, as unfit to associate with these officers?"

The impression prevails about the matter that if an inquiry is ordered into the Beers incident, it will open up a remarkable field of investigation. Scandals of various degrees of seriousness have heretofore embarrassed the navy. Some have been hushed up and others have resulted in discharges of those responsible or involuntary resignations. The Beers affair is not regarded as a reflection upon any one except the officer in charge and the navy department in its explanation does not give their names—who have indicated that the social standards at Annapolis are so high that none save the better classes and gold-braided officers are wanted at naval hops. An inquiry into this attitude doubtless will prove embarrassing to the navy as well as to the navy department, but entirely different affairs have been.

BULLET IN BRAIN MAN STILL LIVES

Lead Missile from .22 Rifle Lodges in Man's Skull and After Seven Weeks He is Still Alive.

Prescott, Ariz., May 1.—With a bullet imbedded in his skull over seven weeks ago, and after passing through one critical stage after another since receiving the wound, J. M. Rivera will eventually recover and will be a well man, was the statement made yesterday by his attending physician. This case has attracted probably more attention and occasioned more professional interest than any other in recent years that has come before the medical fraternity. At the time of being shot with a .22-caliber bullet Mr. Rivera was in his tent house on the old baseball grounds in the northwestern part of the city, sitting in a chair. The bullet came crashing through the canvas and lodged in the top of his head, going directly through in a vertical line for over three inches. After he was wounded he sank to the floor and since that time has hovered between life and death. For several days afterward he was in an unconscious condition and it was with difficulty that he ate food to sustain life. Later he regained his mental faculties, when paralysis of the right side followed. In this condition he gave symptoms of the end approaching and it was believed that death was only a matter of a few days. But during the past week another change has taken place in his physical condition and he is regaining the use of that portion of the body stricken over five weeks ago. Yesterday for the first time he walked for a few feet and used the arm that was helpless. His mental condition is said to be perfect and while the wound is kept clean and open his physician states that he will soon be a well man. The bullet remains in his skull and no effort will be made to extract it. As far as it is possible to discern its location it is believed to be lying in the bone at the base of his brain. Rivera was accidentally shot, it is believed, but who fired the bullet has never been ascertained.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM The primary cause of Rheumatism results from weak kidneys, constipation, indigestion, etc., forming impure accumulations in the system. These sour and ferment, causing uric acid, which is absorbed from the stomach and intestines into the blood. This changes the circulation from a thick, rich fluid to a thin, acid stream, depositing inflammatory matter into the muscles, nerves, and joints. The longer the blood is allowed to remain in this impure condition the more severe will Rheumatism become. Gradually the muscles harden and lose their elasticity, the joints begin to stiffen, and frequently calcareous deposits form knots at the finger joints. There is just one way to CURE Rheumatism, and that is to cleanse the blood of the uric acid poison. S. S. S., by removing every particle of the cause and PURIFYING the blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. S. S. S. eliminates the uric acid because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It filters out every trace of the sour, inflammatory matter, cools the acid-heated blood, furnishes the material for multiplying the rich, nutritious corpuscles of the circulation, and by its fine tonic effects assists the system to rapidly overcome the effects of the disease. Special book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.
