Great German Newspaper Reflects Germany's Attitude Since War Begun

(Correspondence "of" the Associated Press.) The Hague, Sept. 16.—The present attitude of Germany towards England, France and Russia is described in an editorial of the Berliner Tageblatt of September 14, which, after admitting that the German advance in the west has been checked, while considerable victories for the German arms have been obtained in the eastern theater of war, says:

filled the skeptics with hope. There are in France people, however, who have not been the guests of the czar, who unlike the Paris papers do not gain by supporting the alliance, whose personal fate does not depend upon that of Russia, and whose brain is clear enough to reason logically to final results.

"The Times, in a very beautiful leader, has presented to them the British resolution not to end this war. 'Whatever happens in the west,' says this article, 'Russia and we will continue the war—if necessary for twenty years!'

"What were the feelings of the French when they read the words of a boaster who talks loudly because he possesses England secure against the suffering of this war? Twenty years is a long time when the army of the enemy occupies the center of the country. No, even the pledges of the Times are not sufficient to halt the pessimism which made itself felt in France.

"But we may accept that a favorable presentation of the French successes along the Marne have again surprised nobody here. Those who think calmly knew this before the first cannon shot was fired. But this formal assurance was merely made to show us the futility of this war and our successes in France.

"The indications in the French press are that the declaration was also intended to quiet the French people. 'This Anglo-French-Russian declaration,' writes the Petit Parisien, 'finds a justified echo throughout the allied countries. It will bring the pessimists to silence, who already are shaking their heads and whose feet are an insult to Russian patriotism, French endurance and English loyalty.'

"The English and French newspapers have recently said that the resolution of the powers of the triple entente not to make peace without consulting one another had made a painful impression in Germany. We hope that this understanding between Messrs. Grey, Poincare and Jawliski

TERRIBLE PICTURES OF RESULTS OF GREAT WAR IN AUSTRIA

People Wait in Dumb and Silent Misery for Some News of Hopeful Nature from Wrecked Armies.

WOMEN NOW DOING ALL HEAVY MANUAL LABOR

Have Learned That Government's Report Are Not to Be Relied on and Now Depend on Wounded for War News.

(Associated Press Correspondence.) London, Sept. 23.—A news letter received by the Reuter Telegram company from Venice reads: "According to word received here from Vienna, the Austrian public is waiting in dumb patience for some definite news as to what is really happening at Gallata and along the Serbian frontier. Although there is an uneasy feeling that affairs are not going well for Austria, the mass of the people still pin their faith on Germany, and are confident that no matter what happens now, the Germans will eventually save the situation.

DEAN'S BUFF ORPINGTONS

Have been trying to boost the poultry industry in general, and S. C. Buff Orpingtons in particular, at the New Mexico State Fair for five years in succession. This is the fourth year the hen represented by this cut has been exhibited at Albuquerque. She is accompanied this season by three of her progeny—two cockerels and one pullet.

11,000,000 besides a number of loan institutions for advancing money without interest in order to carry on various industrial enterprises. "Numerous suggestions have been made for by-passing roads coming from hostile countries, notably England and France, but they have met with scanty support in the most influential commercial circles. The Prague chamber of commerce refused to endorse such a proposal saying that it would be quite useless at the present moment besides being dangerous for Austrian commercial interests later on. Outside Vienna and Budapest the aspect of the whole country is lifeless and apparently devoid of active men, and presents an appearance of strange and oppressive quietness. Great factories are completely shut down, furnaces are out, doors are locked and not even a watchman is visible in the streets. The small towns are deserted save for a few children here and there, and there are scarcely any workers in the fields. The few who may be seen are chiefly women and occasionally old men.

assuming serious proportions, especially in Vienna and Budapest. Many hundreds have been given work in the construction of fortifications along the Danube in the neighborhood of Vienna and hundreds more have been sent from the towns into the country to work in the fields. The Austrian peasants are displaying great industry in exploiting the state. They refuse to pay city workers any wages at all and house and feed them miserably. For this they claim from the state four shillings for each worker per day. The government, however, declined to yield to such exorbitant demands. In Vienna funds are being raised to feed the unemployed but the demand is constantly increasing since, besides the unemployed, the city is crowded with Galicians. "Life in Vienna parallels much the same course as before the war. Cafes and restaurants are filled and some of the theaters are open. The Imperial Court Opera and the court theater will be opened shortly four times weekly, the performers having finally agreed to accept reduced salaries for a period of four months. Over half the street railway employees have been called into the army and in consequence the service has been grossly reduced. Nine hundred men have been engaged, but some time must elapse before they are competent to run the trains. A large number of police have also rejoined the army, but the city is perfectly quiet and orderly. So far there have been no demonstrations against the embassies of the allied powers. The prices of food are not much above the normal, although an advance reported of the wholesale prices of wheat, barley and rye will affect the cost of food and bread. The price of petroleum has risen considerably and many refineries have closed down. During operations have ceased but exports of Galician oil to Germany have increased because American oil is no longer arriving in its usual quantities."

FALL & WINTER Combined Forces Some stores give quality first consideration, others consider price first. We consider both at the same time. When we offer you a necktie at 50c, or a hat at $2.00, you may feel sure that it's the best quality for the price on the market. The fact that a big percentage of buyers come back for additional supplies when in need of them is a good sign of square dealing. M. MANDELL The Live Clothier
