OFFICIAL PAPER FOR CITY OF ALBUQUERQUE

EL PASO HELD A MERRY STORM ELECTION

Politician Cobb and Policeman
Rynerson Fight at the Polls One Round.

BIG POLICEMAN PUT THE LITTLE POLITICIAN OUT

Rynerson Formerly of New Mexico
Has Been in El Paso
Last Few Years.

El Paso: After assaulting Zach Lamar Cobb, one of the ardent supporters of the "citizens" ticket, Will Rynerson, special policeman, was arrested by Policeman Ormand and is held at the police station without bail. Mayor Charles Davis, learning of the assault, ordered Chief W. A. Mitchell, of the police department, to make Rynerson surrender his commission. The assault was witnessed by many eye-witnesses, and there were numerous reports, all varying in detail, within a short time after the fracas, which occurred about 11 o'clock, in front of precinct 3, at the central fire station.

Zach Cobb's version of the assault is practically the same as that of Rynerson. Said Cobb, when asked, "What happened?" "I was walking along the street just north of the voting precinct, and passed Rynerson, who was standing in the street. I heard him say something about 'damn little fice,' and I turned after being insulted and went after him. I struck at Rynerson, but don't know whether I hit him or not."

He was then asked as to the extent of his injuries, and replied: "I don't care about the injuries, just so it brings the voter."

According to eye-witnesses Rynerson then struck Cobb, and delivered two blows which knocked him against the brick wall of the fire station. His lip was severely lacerated and he bled freely from the wound, and his right hand was lacerated.

The report got out that Rynerson tried to draw his gun, but Policeman Ormand, who was on the scene and made the arrest, prevented him from doing so. He took the gun from him shortly after it occurred. There were many bystanders who saw the affair, and it is said that W. E. McLean, Cobb's assistant, was also present.

Cobb had his glasses on at the time he was struck by Rynerson, and did not receive injury as a result of this, although both blows were landed on his face.

Rynerson Tells His Story.
Will Rynerson, who was kept in Chief Mitchell's office, and not locked up, said:
"I was standing out in the street to the west of the fire station, when Cobb passed in front of the building. He spoke, and said, 'How do you do.' I answered, 'I don't want a damn little fice like you to speak to me.' He wheeled like a shot and came back fighting. He struck at me, and the blow landed on my shoulder. I then struck him twice, and it was all over."

LABOR FEDERATION AND LUMBERJACK PEOPLE.

Duluth, Minn.: The Minnesota State Federation of Labor will investigate the conditions in the lumber camps of the northern part of the state, where it appears that the lumberjacks are alleged to be subjected to a form of peonage without being able to obtain justice. W. E. McKewen, secretary of the federation, is responsible for this statement. He says the condition has been existing for many years, that the men have been placed in involuntary servitude without being given a fair trial; that the law is not being enforced; that the law is entirely one-sided, not giving the men the shadow of a chance to defend themselves.

The situation in some of the lumber camps in northern Minnesota is awful," he continued. "Putting men in prison because they have no means of getting out, and that they have not worked out their transportation is nothing more nor less than involuntary servitude. We have about twenty cases in a free country, but here we find shocking abuses of personal liberty existing right in our midst without a protest being offered against it. I believe in the highest authority that the law is unconstitutional. I have the opinions of three attorneys to that effect. The state federation has been working in quietness upon these cases for some time with a view to securing evidence that will have the law either amended or repealed. It is an outrage to throw workmen into jail to get out of their jobs because they do not find the conditions under which they are required to work agreeable."

SURPRISING STRIKE ON THE GLOBE-ARIZONA PROPERTY.
Globe, Ariz.: The Globe-Arizona Mining company, which recently took over the Rogers, Starr & Rolling property, adjoining the Superior & Boston and Old Dominion, is making better headway than the purchasers of the property anticipated, and mining men who have recently visited the property believe that the company has one of the best showings of quick results in the district. While cleaning out the old shaft, which had caved in, miners discovered an old crosscut about fifty feet from the surface. It had been covered by shaft timbers several years ago and these timbers, which had rotted, were being replaced when the discovery was made. The crosscut is only twenty feet long, but it cuts a vein of high grade ore, about four feet wide.

The discovery of the old working was a cause of considerable comment among old mining men who are acquainted with that section. No one seemed to have known of it, except those who sold the property being unaware of the crosscut. It was later recalled that Tom Reinhart, who formerly worked the mine for silver and had taken a considerable quantity of ore from the small crosscut. This ore ran into copper, but the extremely low price then of the red metal made its mining there prohibitive and the mine was abandoned. It is evident that the entire vicinity is heavily mineralized. A few days ago ore in good quantity was discovered in blasting into the foot-wall twenty feet from the surface, to install new timbers. The mine is expected to start shipping soon after the arrival of the steam hoisting plant, which has been ordered.

MEXICO ROADS PRO- POSE LOW RATE ON WHEAT

American Farmers to Receive the Benefit--Mexico Crop Short.

The railroads of Mexico are to do their share in securing wheat from the United States to supply the deficiency caused by a partial crop failure in Mexico. In line with the recent removal of about 70 per cent of the duty on wheat the railroads are now considering a reduction in the freight rates on the grain, and it is probable that by this week the rate will be reduced, thus facilitating the work of the government in securing grain. The present rate on wheat is $19 per 1,000 kilos, and this will probably be reduced to $17 per 1,000 kilos.

This rate applies on all roads through every gateway to Mexico and the reduction will be agreed on by all the roads. Most of the wheat shipped from the United States comes by rail over either the National lines or the Mexican Central, practically coming by Vera Cruz or other gateway ports. The reduction now being considered and which there is little doubt will go into effect within a few days, will mean a reduction made a year ago and will probably remain in effect as long as the reduction in duty.

The duty has been reduced from $5 per 1,000 kilos to $1.50 per 1,000 kilos and this with the reduction in the freight rate will result in a saving of several hundred dollars a car on wheat and other grain in hundreds of cars of this grain to Mexico City.

HAVE BEEN GERMANS BY BIRTH OR DESCENT

First to Come Was Peter Minnewit
In 1626, and Now They Number Fully 12,000,000.

(By Frederick J. Haskin.)
According to the most conservative estimates, there are at least 12,000,000 people in America who are either German or of German extraction. We have more than 9,000,000 citizens who were actually born in the Fatherland. They are diffused through every portion of the country, but New York has the largest German colony in the world. After that the greatest number are found in Pennsylvania, the only state where the German language is spoken, and the German or English language should be the official tongue of the legislature, a German east the deciding vote in favor of the English. Nine governors of Pennsylvania have been of German descent. In the west this "only day" with German roots was at one time a concerted effort in Wisconsin to make that only a German state. Probably 75 per cent of the population of Milwaukee is of German extraction.

The history of the Germans in the United States is as picturesque as any traditions cherished by the American people. Peter Minnewit, Wessel, was the first German to set foot on American soil. He came in 1624 as first governor of New Netherlands, but the initial colony was not established until 1683, in the land of William Penn. This little band of thirteen families came on the good ship the "Dutchess" and settled on their Plymouth Rock. The immigration during the rest of the century, but the accession of good German blood to the throne of England and her generous protection of the persecuted Germans led them in 1765 to leave their desolate homes for England, from where they were sent to people the American colonies.

The brilliant, picturesque Baron von Steuben, drillmaster and inspector general of the army, was called the right-hand of Washington because he took a mob and hammered it into an army. When the continental soldiers were starving at Valley Forge and a plea was sent forth for funds nine Germans responded by raising $100,000. The superintendent of the barracks at Valley Forge was Christopher Ludwig, who was described by General Washington as "my honest friend." Michael Hilligus was the first treasurer of the United States, and afterward of the United States, was of that nationality. It was Heinrich Miller who became printer for the convention, and a German editor "scopied" his colleagues on the birth of the United States.

Two stalwart figures of the revolution were the sons of Henry H. Muntenberg, the founder of the Lutheran church in America. The first, the Rev. Peter G. Muhlenberg, of Woodstock, Va., called his little flock together one Sunday morning, preached a stirring sermon on the glories of war for the right, then threw aside his clerical robes and donned a uniform, and called on all those who would follow him. At the church door he made up a company of 200 men, and with this handful he went through the war, becoming colonel, then brigadier general, and finally major general. His statue has been placed in the national hall in Washington by the state of Pennsylvania. His brother, Frederick A. Muhlenberg was president of the convention which ratified the constitution of the United States. Later he was made speaker of the first and third congresses, and it was his deciding vote, in the memorable deadlock of April 29, 1792, which made the Jay treaty operative.

The first force to reach Lincoln in 1861 to defend the union was a regiment from Pennsylvania composed almost entirely of descendants of revolutionary patriots, who in the earlier days were the first to reach George Washington. It was the Germans who saved Missouri and Kentucky for the union. Over 200,000 were there during the war, and of the north, 5,000 of whom were officers.

There were twenty-seven German patriots on the ill-fated Maine which was sunk in Havana harbor. Chief Gunner Leonard G. F. Kuehlwein fired the first shot at Manila. There were thirty German officers in the Roosevelt's rough rider regiment, and of the three first American flags planted on San Juan hill, one was carried by Captain Frederick Muller, of the rough riders. There was a German in Hobson's little band, and Admiral Schley, the hero of the battle of Santiago, was of German descent. All of which goes to show that in times of stress Uncle Sam may well depend upon his German sons.

Although the Germans themselves do not boast of their war record, claiming to be a peaceful people, the archives of American wars show some interesting facts about them as soldiers. The first regiment to reach General Washington after his call to arms was the York county regiment, composed of German soldiers, and tenant Heinrich Miller. More than forty companies in the war of the revolution were composed of men of this race, most of them coming from New York and Pennsylvania. Paul L. Walfel is the chief engineer of the American Bridge company, and Henry Wehrum was the builder of the Leekawanna steel works at Buffalo. The great Nevada tunnel was executed by Adolph Sutor.

In finance there are Charles M. Schwab, Henry Frick, and Frederick Weyerhaeuser, recently claimed to be the richest man in the world. The American captains of industry show in their ranks such men as Claus Spreckels, the sugar king; Henry Fink, the railroad president, and Henry Miller, the cattle king. Adolphus Busch and Frederick Fabst are the world's greatest brewers. The Germans have always been prominent in politics. Of the men holding seats in the conventional assembly in 1774, six were Germans, and in the Pennsylvania delegation to congress there have always been from five to ten Germans. Richard Bartholdi, in the lower house of the national congress from Missouri, has been made president of the inter-parliamentary union. Frank Steinhart, the brilliant consul general of Havana, is of German descent.

Christopher Sauer printed the first American Bible in any European language, and in 1787 wrote the first American school book. George Anshutz was the first Pittsburgh ironmaker. Thomas Nast was the first great American cartoonist. Gustav Beyer has the largest collection of American beetles. P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia, has the finest private library in America. Peter Miller was the first to translate the declaration of independence, reprinted in seven languages, and John Wanamaker, who is today the most prominent merchant of America, elevated the department store to its present broad scope.

We derived many of our superstitions and folk lore from the Germans. The seven years of bad luck supposed to attend one who breaks a looking-glass, is the result of their superstition, those who fear to start on a journey on Friday are indebted to them for the idea. Those who plant potatoes and onions by the number of the fingers, and those who horoscopes cast once during the year, owe their ensuing luck to the same source. The groundhog as a weather prophet, selected for first recognition in the Fatherland, and the feather bed is a German contribution to our civilization.

NEW STYLED AIRSHIP ALREADY TO SAIL

are two engine rooms where in are the engines and the men who control the two sets of propellers on the sides of the machines. Amidships is the "main cabin," which is connected with the engine room by narrow passageways. The engine rooms are compartments within the outer frame of the ship, partitioned off from the heart of the balloon, which contains the hydrogen gas. A telephone system connects all the stations with the "main cabin."

Which Tolver came from, where he secured the fortune required to build the ship, are all deep mysteries to the natives. The invention was moved into the canyon three miles from Pleasanton seven years ago. He made few acquaintances, and had few friends, and for five years before anyone knew what he was about.

"I have positively solved aerial navigation," says the inventor, a mysterious, dark-skinned, little-speaking and hard-proportioned man. "I am betting my life and that of my wife, for she is going to make the initial ascent with me, that my idea is right. For seven long years my assistants and I have worked secretly in this canyon, keeping an armed watch over the ship day and night to hold off the spies. Today practically no one knows me, but tomorrow my name will be on every one's lips. My ship will fly like a bird."

Then the inventor's wife, a courageous, bright blue in her eyes, spoke up.

"We have worked side by side on the great quest since our hydrocra- stich in the 5,000 yards of progress was made by my fingers. My husband's dreams have been my dreams, and his hopes have been my hopes. When the ship sails it will carry me with it."

Tolver's airship is cigar-shaped, with the propelling mechanisms and
