WALL STREET.

New York, Dec. 5.—The general tendency of the market during the morning was reactionary, although movements were confined and little progress was made by the list as a whole toward a lower level. Strength of the market having been exhausted temporarily by the midweek rise, bears renewed their attack, singling out stocks which appeared to be most vulnerable on account of the effect of continued business recessions in certain lines.
 Further unfavorable reports from the copper and steel trades another drop in copper metal, and the evidences in the last railroad statements that the earnings were still falling off, furnished an ostensible basis for bear selling. Higher money rates put a stop to speculative buying of any importance.
 Pessimistic views by bankers caused the marking up of call money, renewals commanding 8 1/2 per cent.
 Bonds were irregular. Reduction in the probable cash loss by the bank tomorrow below previous estimates, which caused shading in call loans which had touched 4-1/2 per cent. The tone of stocks was also better. Reading reaching its best figure.
