FRANKLYN STILL IN JAIL.

SERIOUS CHARGES MADE AGAINST HIM BY SIR BACHE CUNARD.

Accused of Refusing to Turn Over Cash and Securities to the Amount of $3,000,000. How He and Sir Bache Speculated Together—His Counsel Thinks That He Has Been Hardly Used—The News on the Street.

In a cell in Ludlow Street Jail Charles G. Franklyn, formerly agent of the Cunard Steamship Line, and the president of the Horn Silver Mining Company, who was arrested yesterday in a suit brought against him by his cousin, Sir Bache Cunard, of England, to recover $3,000,000 damages, is still languishing, being unable to obtain the $600,000 bail which is demanded for his release. He is morose and depressed in spirits. This morning he refused to see the representative of any newspaper, declining even to talk with Warden Keating, for fear that he might communicate with outsiders. No one had been to visit the prisoner up to 10 o'clock this morning.

The papers in the case, which are now in the hands of the sheriff, put an entirely different light on the case from that presented in the first accounts. The arrest is made in an action brought against the defendant for the wrongful conversion of property held by him in a fiduciary capacity. The complaint, which is drawn up by Whitlock and Simonds, counsel for Sir Bache Cunard, the plaintiff, recites the fact that on Sept. 2, 1872, the plaintiff was in the possession of bonds and securities valued at $1,000,000. At that time he appointed Charles G. Franklyn, his confidential agent, to manage the investment in this estate, and the latter took possession and agreed to act in this capacity, which he did, but no portion of the income of these investments was paid over until Oct. 25, 1885. On Oct. 2, 1885, the plaintiff placed in Franklyn's hands as agent an additional sum of $100,000 in cash to hold, manage and invest for his account, and he received and continued to operate with it until Sept. 25, 1885.

In July, 1885, the plaintiff demanded that Franklyn deliver over to him all the securities in his hands. Not hearing anything from Franklyn, the plaintiff made a personal demand upon Franklyn for the money, and an accounting of the funds which he had held from the beginning. It is further stated in the affidavit that the defendant admitted to the plaintiff at that time, in July, 1885, that he had taken and converted to his own use and sold or hypothecated for his own purposes bonds and securities to the amount of $500,000, and could not turn the money over. He furthermore begged the plaintiff not to take any proceedings against him, but he begged that if not hampered by the publication of the facts in the case he would be able in time to repay all. Relying upon this and being unwilling to disgrace his relative, for Franklyn was his nephew, the plaintiff consented that the defendant would do all in his power to repay the amount that he had converted, he forbore to bring suit at that time.

On Sept. 25, 1885, Gordon, brother of the plaintiff, came over in the plaintiff's name and Franklyn paid over to him $328,560 in cash, and gave him a statement of debts and liabilities which showed the indebtedness of the defendant to the plaintiff to be $508,367.58, and promised to make further payments as soon as he could realize on securities that he had pledged.

Since that time, however, the plaintiff had not received a cent of the amount of the debt, in spite of repeated requests and demands, and he had practically refused to deliver over to him any of the securities or the value of the plaintiff's $3,000,000. The complaint demands judgment in this amount.

Lawyer Hubbard, of Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, counsel for the plaintiff, said that his client had been very hardily used in this matter. He claimed that Franklyn and Cunard, when they first began to operate for the joint account, made a very profitable thing out of it and that in the early years of the arrangement a good deal of money was divided. Business misfortunes had made it impossible for him to fulfil his engagements.

The feeling in the street was one of surprise at the arrest of Franklyn on account of his high social standing and his reputation as a man of wealth. Not a word of this matter had even been breathed before. A good deal of suspicion had been excited by his relations with the Horn Silver Mining Company, and it probably was the mysterious "call loan" for $648,000, which stands in Mr. Franklyn's name will now be fully investigated. The speculation or investments of Mr. Franklyn with his cousin's money included rail road, mining and gas stocks and various other securities in which he was supposed to have an inside track.

The following extracts from letters written by Franklyn to Sir Bache Cunard during the progress of these transactions throw additional interesting light upon the case. The first is from a letter written Sept. 2, 1885, and is as follows:

MY DEAR BACHE: I have begun to write to you several times, but each time I find it up as a bad job. Everything has gone so wrong and I have had such a struggle to keep above water that I has about used me up. I now write to ask you to cheer up and not to think of anything which Gordon says you contemplate. I will not be any more to you some money and in time I feel sure I shall be able to make good everything to you and all. The probability is that I shall be able to help the situation much that I can see. In fact it has done more harm than ever can be made up to me. However, I have nothing to say about it, except that I will devote myself to making good all the damage I have done.

Another written Sept. 25, 1885, is as follows: DEAR BACHE: I have sent many part of the interest of my money and Annie here. There is no reason why they should not be as well as for income as they have ever been. I will get back the principal for them. I will work my best for you and them at any rate until you are returned.

A third, written March 26, 1887, reads: DEAR BACHE—You say I am not doing anything to assist you, after having ruined you. That is mainly to be seen. If you are going to rate up everything and try to help yourself, I do not see that I am to blame.

His Third Attempt at Suicide. He was found by his landlady, and is now dying in Gouverneur Hospital.

HASTY PUDDINGS GET THE HONORS.

Election of Officers for the Next Class Day at Harvard.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 21.—The election of Harvard class-day officers took place last evening in Massachusetts Hall. For a great many years Boylston Hall has been the scene of this annual contest for class-day honors, but this year the scene was transferred to old Massachusetts, and there for many hours the contest was waged last night. St. Paige, president of F. B. Lund officiated as secretary. Many of the elections were closely contested. In the contest for first Marshal, J. Walter Wood, of New York, was elected by a clear majority. Mr. Wood is one of the handsomest men in the college, and is a member of his friends in the college. He has been a prominent football player for two years and has rowed in the Varsity crew. He has been prominent in college societies and is an influential member of the Harvard Athletic Club. Mr. Lloyd McKim Garrison, of New York, was elected poet, over Mr. Leahy. Mr. Garrison is a prominent literary man in college. He is President of the Glee and a member of the O. K. Society. He is also a member of the Hasty Pudding Club.

Mr. H. S. Sanford, of New York, was elected editor by a majority of sixty-three votes, over Mr. Leahy, the incumbent. Sanford is another literary man, being an editor of the Crimson and Advocate. He is a member of the O. K. and Hasty Pudding clubs. J. H. Sedgwick, of New York, was elected ivy orator over L. Honore by a large majority. He is regarded as a bright and clever fellow, and is very popular, being a member of a number of literary and social societies. Mr. Carpenter, of Chicago, was elected chorister over F. H. Whipples by thirteen votes. He is the leader of the glee club, and is the most prominent musical critic in class. The largest fight was over the Class-Day Committee. The chairman of this committee is considered second only to the Marshal's and the position is greatly coveted. Messrs. George B. Leighton, of the City, and Charles G. Leighton, of the City, were the candidates, the two former being very closely together. Mr. Palmer finally won. Bradley W. Palmer, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is the manager of the football team, and is considered an executive ability, the main requisite for the position. George B. Leighton, of St. Louis, Mo., the competitor in the former election, was easily elected to the second place on the Class-Day Committee.

MODERN ROMEO AND JULIET.

A Filtration Which Led to a Young Man's Arrest for Abduction.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 21.—Justice Smith has not yet given a decision in the case of eighteen-year-old Jimmy Duffy, who was held on the supposition that he knew something about the whereabouts of little Amanda Hendricks, the attractive fourteen-year-old daughter of Thomas Hendricks, a teamster, at 2428 Master street. Mr. Hendricks told the Court that the night before last he saw his daughter, who is known as the most artistic whistler blower among the drivers on the Continental Passenger Railway line, was firing with his revolver at a man who was driving a motor car. He said that he saw the man who was firing at Amanda when she was on her way to a neighboring bakery or milk store. Then when the father was away Duffy called at the Hendricks home and told the young couple had many talks over the back fence, while he frequently played Romeo to her Juliet from a second-story window. Later in the night Mr. Hendricks called home and he would find Duffy and Amanda interviewed each other on the front stoop. He always ordered Duffy never to speak to the girl again, while he took her in the house and gave her a key to the door. On Tuesday afternoon a neighbor discovered Amanda on her back shed leaning over talking to Duffy, who was planted on his back shed and told her father. The last seen of Amanda, Mr. Hendricks said, he is positive Duffy persuaded her to skip.

JUNIORS AND SOPHS AT ODDS.

A Little Outbreak Between the Two Classes at State College.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 21.—At a recent meeting of the college faculty yesterday it was unanimously decided to excuse the members of the Junior Class from attending rhetorical exercises. Those exercises were held last evening at the college hall, and each member of the Freshman and Sophomore classes received his share of applause. When one of the Juniors was delivering his oration the Sophomores signalled to the Freshman to applaud. The Sophomores were to be ruled by the Sophomores, and each Junior was in turn received with enthusiastic applause. The Sophomores, bent on revenge, decided to go to room to room and compel each Freshman to stand upon a chair and deliver a declamation. They were successful in two cases, and were about to secure another victim when the Juniors came to the rescue and a general rush ensued. The Sophomores are very indignant, and have passed resolutions condemning the action of the Junior Class for the part they took in the affair. Two members of the Junior Class received slight injuries during the rush.

Among the number were several New York people, including Dr. William Foley and wife, Mrs. Catharine Miller and wife, who is about to become a mother, and William F. Simmons, a cooper, of 238 West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, all of whom are reported seriously injured.

A GIRL'S FRIGHTFUL FALL.

PICKED UP CRUSHED AND BRUISED SIXTY FEET BELOW.

Sequel to a Many-Handed Fight in an Uptown Tenement—It Was Not Known Whether She Slipped From the Roof Or Was Thrown Down—The Police Report That They Can Learn Nothing About It.

EVENT EEN-YEAR-OLD Mamie Foley, who was found last night in a terrible crushed condition in the yard of the rear tenement, 506 West Fifty-fifth street, lies at the Roosevelt Hospital in a very precarious condition. From her statement and inquiries made at the house, the police report, "Fellow throw herself from the roof," seems very unsatisfactory. Mamie is a good-looking and well-behaved girl, who keeps house for her widowed father and her brother and sister, at No. 524 West Fifty-fifth street. Just after supper last evening, she had sewing to do, and left the house to borrow a pair of scissors from Mrs. Boney, who lives on the top floor of No. 506. Mrs. Boney has a young lodger named Michael Pine, who has been keeping company with Mamie some little time, and the knowledge that she would meet her young man may have induced her to go so far for the scissors. She found Michael there drinking beer along the coast the last twenty-four hours. The Boston Towboat Company have two tugs, the O. M. Winch and the Confidence, in New York Harbor waiting smooth weather. The tug, however, has been engaged to be graphed to put out to the assistance of the stranded Allegheny as soon as possible. The other tugs, the Underwriter and the Ocean King, belonging to the same towboat company, left Boston last night. The Underwriter got almost along the Cape, or about opposite Highland Light, when the severity of the gale warned her to put back. The Confidence, however, the Underwriter was making to get into Provincetown Harbor. The gale came from the southeast and was reported to be one of the most severe that has been experienced in the month of October. The Ocean King was on her way to New York with two barges in tow, but must have been compelled to put into some harbor, probably at the Vineyard.

ASHORE ON VERPLANCK'S POINT.

The Hudson River Steamer J. L. Hasbrouck ran ashore at Verplanck's Point at 9:30 o'clock last night.

The Hudson River steamer J. L. Hasbrouck ran ashore at Verplanck's Point at 9:30 o'clock last night. The night was very thick and rainy. The pilot mistook the lights of several vessels at anchor below the point for the lights of the Hasbrouck, and he attempted to turn what he supposed was the point he ran hard aground. The J. L. Miller, a boat of the same line, was on the Hasbrouck, but was not hurt. The Hasbrouck struck a small boat to the Miller to say that there was no danger. The steamer James T. Brett will take off the Hasbrouck. Her bows is about fifty feet on land. It is badly stove up. The steamer is owned by the Boston and Albany Transportation Company. She is commanded by Capt. Cooper, and is piloted by James Delamater and H. Clough. The Hasbrouck lies in a very bad position. Her bows is about fifty feet on land. It is badly stove up. The steamer is owned by the Boston and Albany Transportation Company. She is commanded by Capt. Cooper, and is piloted by James Delamater and H. Clough.

TEEMER IS READY FOR GAUDAUR.

The Great Oarsman Talks to the "Evening World" About the Coming Race.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 21.—As the time for having the question of superiority settled between John Teemer, champion oarsman of America, and Jake Gaudaur, ex-champion, draws near the interest of the spectators is growing. Teemer, who is the favorite of the "Evening World" correspondent, and in speaking of the race, said: "My new Rudderock arrived from New York Monday by the Franconia, and Wallace Ross brought her on. She's a beauty and, I think, some improvement on the craft I used in the race with Hanan. "I was out in the new boat twice to-day, accompanied by the Franconia, and I am sure that I lost sight of the fact that Gaudaur has beaten me the last four times we have met, and I have not won a race since. I am sure that I shall do everything that lies in my power to down him, and so settle up that old score of June, 1886. "How about your proposed trip abroad?" "I don't know any more about my proposed trip to Europe, but I am sure that I will go if anything Mr. Keenan does for me that line will be right. In my own opinion I think Teemer will win the race, but I am sure that I will have money for him, if he will row, but he must have learned something of Yankee scullers during his visit here." The race will take place on Oct. 27.

Coal Strikers Still Firm.

The Operations at the Upper Mine and Derringer Collieries Still Continue.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) HARTFORD, Pa., Oct. 21.—The operations at the Upper Mine and Derringer collieries still continue, but very little coal is shipped. The operators have thus far been unsuccessful in breaking the ranks of the strikers, except in cases where the proper relief was not given and the men were forced to work to provide bread for their families, but even in these cases the men profess a willingness to discontinue if the promised support comes to them. The operators held a meeting at which Frank and Chuck yesterday afternoon to agree on a line of policy with reference to forcing a resumption.

Chapman vs. the Globe Newspaper Co. which was an action to recover $30,000 damages for the publication of an alleged libelous article in the Globe of the issue of March 24, 1887. THE ALLEGHENY ASHORE.

Beached at Chatham to Keep from Going to the Bottom.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) CHATHAM, Mass., Oct. 21.—Steamer Allegheny, from Baltimore for Boston, is ashore at Chatham. The Allegheny is 250 feet long, 38.5 feet breadth of beam, 16.6 feet depth, and registered 201,442 gross tonnage and 143,308 net tonnage. She was built at Philadelphia in 1881; has three decks and two masts, and is owned by the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Company of Baltimore. The Allegheny left Boston for Baltimore Thursday, Oct. 13. Last Monday she left Baltimore in the afternoon for Boston. She had on board a promiscuous cargo of freight and eight passengers. A short stop was made at Norfolk, that port being left Wednesday forenoon. Last evening, when off Chatham, the gale whose approach had been prophesied by the evening papers struck her. No news of the Allegheny was heard this morning, but the following telegram was received by the agent of the company to which she belongs: CHATHAM, Mass., Oct. 21. Geo. F. Smalley, Central Wharf, Boston. Allegheny ashore three miles S. W. by W. from Chatham, and is ashore on the West Chop. Run ashore to keep from sinking. Want divers, lights, steam pumps and tug at once. Think lower hold and lower deck between No. 11. Think ship cargo and cargo in dangerous condition. Eight passengers, all well. Will send where first chance. Ship damaged forward. Think not to be saved. Mr. Appold. Ship in three fathoms of water.

Dr. Burquet Strikes Within One Door of His House, but is Arrested All the Same.

Dr. Daniel Burquet, a Frenchman, sixty years old, and residing at No. 224 West Fifteenth street, made a mistake last night as to the house he lived in. He had been dining well. When he found himself near home he gravely climbed the stoop of No. 222, the house adjoining his, and rang the bell. When the door was opened by the servant he tried to push his way into the house. Although the servant assured him that he lived next door he insisted that he was right. The glass door was broken, and on him, leaving him in the vestibule. With one blow of his cane he broke the glass. He was arrested.

Chicago Anarchists Make Their Application for a Writ of Error Today.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—At the hearing of the application for a writ of error in the case of the Chicago Anarchists this morning, Justice Harlan made an order directing that counsel apply for a writ of error directly to the whole Court in open session and said that the application might be made at noon to-day. The street is surprised by this morning's cable to the effect that the firm of Bernard Sanderbank & Co., of Leipzig, has failed for 2,000,000 marks, and that the company making a complete market promises other and still more extensive failures. The street has been informed by this morning's cable that Northern Pacific has not only entered the Oregon Transcontinental Company, in place of preliminary agreement which includes an amicable division of territory with the Union Pacific.

MRS. EVANS COMPLIMENTED.

A Plucky Struggle With a Burglar She Found in a Neighbor's Room.

Mrs. Sophie Evans, of No. 155 Norfolk street, discovered a burglar yesterday in Mrs. Fogelmann's room, which is next hers, and promptly flung her arms about him and held him, notwithstanding the fact that he whined out a razor and threatened her. A struggle ensued, Mrs. Evans clinging to him desperately, and crying for help. The burglar dragged her himself out of the room, and Mrs. Evans had to let go, as the burglar had pulled her to the banister, and was gradually forcing her over it. The burglar did not run a block before Policeman Bissett caught him. The Essex Market Police Court this morning he said he was Louis Rosenblum, of 230 Second street. He came from Russia six months ago. Justice Patterson held him to answer and complimented Mrs. Evans.

OLIVE JUSTICE.

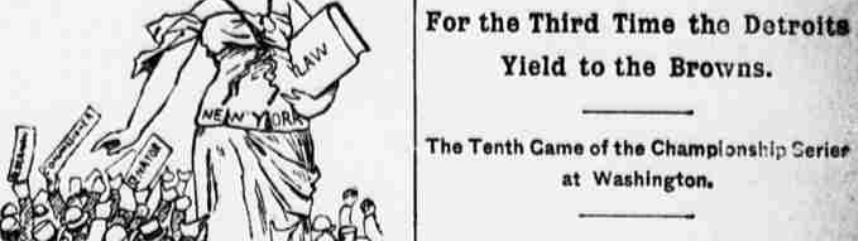

Maurice J. Power looked tired and worried when he arrived at the Westminster Hotel at noon to-day.

He glanced around the corridor, and, approaching Police Justice Andrew J. White, asked if the other members of the County Democracy Sub-Conference Committee had put in an appearance. "No," replied Justice White, "but here comes Commissioner Voorhis." The two Police Justices then went to await the coming of Police Justice Daniel O'Reilly, ex-Commissioner William P. Mitchell, Police Justice Henry Murray and Congressman Timothy J. Campbell. The seven members of the Tammany Hall Conference Committee arrived on time and were seated on sofas in the reading-room when Justices Power and White walked upstairs. "I wonder," remarked Commissioner Croker, "if they will keep us here all day to-day." "Seems to me," exclaimed ex-Alderman James Barker, "they ought to have fixed it up among themselves last night. Judge Power is an obstinate man and he hates to yield." "They are in a nice box," put in Police Justice Welde, "and they will have to agree among themselves before trying to agree with us." Congressman Campbell came in shortly after noon. "Gentlemen, how are you?" he ejaculated, as he faced the Wigwam leaders. "Has Judge Power arrived?" was the next question put by the Congressman. When told that the County Democracy boss was in parlor 82, the Congressman lost no time in reaching the boss's presence. It is now to be expected that all sorts of rumors around the hotel regarding the intentions of the County Democracy leaders. It was said that they were in caucus at the New Amsterdam Club until 9 o'clock this morning, and that a monkey and parrot kind of a time occurred. Several of the leaders were in favor of abandoning James Fitzgerald, but Justice Power insisted upon his nomination for District Attorney. He would not listen to any argument favoring the nomination of Mr. De Lancey Nicolli. It is also understood that a few of the leaders held a conference of their own and were satisfied to have it so as they thought they would not dare to utter publicly or to his face. There was a lack of excitement and of politicians about the Westminster that boded ill for the breaking of the deadlock. The Tammany Hall men did not seem much disturbed by the prospect, and several of them said that they would be perfectly satisfied to have it so as they thought they would not dare to utter publicly or to his face. Resemblance Connecting George Martin's Servant with the Railway Mystery.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 21.—The latest phase of the Railway mystery is the suspicion that George Martin, of Metucker, who employed Annie Ingraham as a servant, knows about her whereabouts after she left the house of Mary Wilson at Bound Brook. When ex-Chief Fitzgerald saw Martin yesterday morning, Martin denied that he had seen Annie since her arrest on May 4, 1886, for an assault upon him. He agreed with Fitzgerald that the picture of the murdered girl resembled the photograph of Annie which was produced. This picture represented Martin and Annie standing together, the woman's right hand resting affectionately on Martin's shoulder. On the wrist of this hand was a broad bracelet, which has not yet been spoken of as found among the effects of the murdered girl. Annie, William Fischer, of Five-Mile Lock, at whose home Annie Ingraham stopped after leaving Mrs. Stephens, of the United States Hotel, was seen by an EVENING WORLD reporter. "I have not the slightest doubt that the murdered woman was Annie," he said. "Annie wore her hair just like that in the picture. She wore stout English shoes always, but I once gave her a pair of low shoes, which she kept for best. I understand that the murdered girl had such a pair of shoes on. Martin visited her several times and quarrelled with her. I told her to have nothing further to do with him and she promised she would not. Once she ran into the house from him and said she locked her door at night while at Martin's house, because I have not the slightest doubt that the murdered woman was Annie." It is now to be expected that all sorts of rumors around the hotel regarding the intentions of the County Democracy leaders. It was said that they were in caucus at the New Amsterdam Club until 9 o'clock this morning, and that a monkey and parrot kind of a time occurred. Mrs. Sophie Evans, of No. 155 Norfolk street, discovered a burglar yesterday in Mrs. Fogelmann's room, which is next hers, and promptly flung her arms about him and held him, notwithstanding the fact that he whined out a razor and threatened her. A struggle ensued, Mrs. Evans clinging to him desperately, and crying for help. The burglar dragged her herself out of the room, and Mrs. Evans had to let go, as the burglar had pulled her to the banister, and was gradually forcing her over it. The burglar did not run a block before Policeman Bissett caught him. The Essex Market Police Court this morning he said he was Louis Rosenblum, of 230 Second street. He came from Russia six months ago. Justice Patterson held him to answer and complimented Mrs. Evans.
