BRAVE BROOKLYN RED CROSS NURSE WINS FRENCH WAR CROSS

Miss JANE McKEE Jane McKee Refused to Leave an American Hospital During a Bombardment.

"For special devotion and contempt for danger" a French War Cross has just been awarded to Miss Jane McKee, 684 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, Red Cross nurse serving at an American hospital near the French front.

During the entire bombardment, Miss McKee, according to despatches received by the Atlantic Division, refused to leave the hospital except to drag wounded men to safety.

"Jane McKee, an American graduate nurse, serving with the First Aid Unit, rendered the greatest service to French and American wounded. She distinguished herself by special devotion and contempt for danger during the bombardment of the hospital by hostile airplanes."

Miss McKee arrived in France with the first contingent of the Women's Overseas Hospital U. S. A. in March. Ten of the unit's forty nurses and nurses' aids were in this group.

An Autumn Show At the Gallery Of Calo & Sons

By W. G. Bowdoin. D. Calo & Sons, No. 107 West 46th Street (the old Babcock Gallery), have inaugurated their autumn show, a number of well known artists being represented.

Gustave Wiegand's good landscape in cheerful colors is entitled "The Springtime Birch." The springtime verdure of the birch trees along the water front has been delightfully handled, and in the distance the mountains, in blue masses, enter delightfully into the composition.

"An Autumn Sunset," by Louis Paul Messar, shows a portion of the roof-trees of a brown house nestling among the trees. The curling smoke from the red chimney is decorative in its treatment. At the right is a well defined wall and a water rest, lying upon the well curb. The brushings are dashing in brilliance. A rambling path connects the house and well. The sky is full of a sunset glow.

"The Plains—Late Afternoon," by W. A. Coffin, deals with a rolling stretch of country. Tufts of grass are scattered over the plain, breaking up the monotony that would otherwise obtain. A colorful mass of clouds takes up half of the sky.

"Cows in Pasture," by G. Glenn Newton, is a usual, vigorously handled and is a good example of the work of Mr. Newell. The cows are well considered and nicely balanced, and the meandering brook in the meadows is a pleasing touch in the picture. The trees of the painting are in good color.

The Montclair Art Museum has reopened for the fall and winter season. The first exhibition there will be a summer sketch exhibition (oil) by prominent artists throughout the country. This will be opened on Sept. 23.

Gustav Cimolletti is to conduct an out-of-door sketch class in Montclair during the months of September and October. Artists desiring to join this class can make the useful arrangements with Miss Innes, Curator of the Montclair Art Museum.

Thomas B. Manley, the well-known painter of boats, miniature and landscapes, has just moved into an attractive studio, Dikes Lane, Montclair, N. J. During the fall and winter Mr. Manley will take a limited number of pupils. Applications for membership in Mr. Manley's classes should be made to Miss Innes, Curator of Montclair Art Museum.

SOLDIER'S MOTHER GETS MORE OFFERS OF NEEDED HELP

Evening World Publicity of the Egelheiser Case Still Bearing Fruit.

The publicity given by The Evening World to the sad case of Mrs. Julia Egelheiser of No. 296 Grove Street, Brooklyn, who was threatened with eviction from her home because she did not possess $13, is still bearing fruit.

Mrs. Egelheiser is the woman who was left without support when her three sons, one of whom gave up his life at Chateau-Thierry, went to the defense of our country.

A reporter for The Evening World this morning saw three letters to the forlorn woman, each bearing the signature "Mother," and each affording proof of a sympathetic public's willingness to give aid where aid is desired.

News of the threatened eviction of Mrs. Julia Egelheiser, who wears a gold star on her star-studded service pin, bore further fruit to-day. Anonymous evidence that her supreme sacrifice shall not remain unappreciated. Three letters, each bearing the signature of "Mother" gave proof of the ready willingness to give aid where aid is well deserved.

"I hasten to share with you what still remains of my son's allotment to me for the month of August—Mother of a Boy Over There." So read one of the letters, with an inclosure of $2. Another, signed herself "One, Yet My All, in France," said: "I am sure if you ask The Evening World they will attempt to straighten out the evident misunderstanding over your allotment and insurance with the authorities at Washington. Please find $2 inclosed."

When an Evening World reporter visited Mrs. Egelheiser at her home this morning she proudly displayed another letter which she had just received from one of the sailors attached to the U. S. S. Robin, Mine Sweeper No. 3. The letter said:

"I read in the papers where you have been called a rent slacker. If your landlord cares to meet me I will give him a good run for his money. If you want to, I will pay your rent up. You do not need to be afraid to let me do it. When I saw that piece in The Evening World it cut me clear to the heart. If there is anything else I could do, let me know. Don't be backward—let me know everything."

"If I can't get the money by working for Uncle Sam, I'll write home for it. I know how it is to be broke and, besides, I have a mother, and if I thought she got the dollar you did I would desert the Navy and clean up the Boche that treated her in this manner. Please write at once and let me know."

"PAUL A. BENNETT, U. S. S. Robin, Mine Sweeper No. 3, care of Postmaster, N. Y."

Mrs. Egelheiser told the reporter she would acknowledge the writer's generous offer, but would decline assistance from so gallant a source. In spite of the fact that the generous remittance from Judge Richards, who paid a personal visit to the humble home of the widow and gave her fifty dollars, with which she paid her rent and grocer's bill has all been used up.
