The Wanamaker Store. Style in Ready-to-Wear Suits

A woman who has not kept pace with the times could not believe what elegance and style are to be found to-day in ready-to-wear suits. Here at Wanamaker's the variety is actually so great that a choice is difficult.

blouse shape, of handsome dark green or blue two-toned serge, lavishly braid-trimmed; high standing collar, with novel epaulet effect over the shoulders. The entire suit is lined throughout with rich check taffeta silk and exquisitely finished.

The two-fold nature of Dr. Ripdath's Great History of the World separates it from all other histories. Other writers have given more or less faithful chronicles of the exploits and achievements of the world's great men and nations; but Dr. Ripdath not only has done this, but also devotes equal space to describing the real life of the real mankind from the earliest begin-

MISSES' SUITS There isn't a break in our readiness to clothe all ages, from grown women down to babies. Here are some of the new things for maidens standing "where the brook and river meet,"—"misses," in the unpoetical language of business.

We add a few more fair specimens of different price-groups. At Wanamaker's you will notice that no matter how low the price, every suit is well tailored and finished; in all the following skirts the seams are bound.

The superiority of Wanamaker clothing shows even more inside than outside. Notice the linings, the stitching, the way inner pockets and seams are finished. Excellence shows all through—but it begins inside.

Girls' Coats, 6 to 14 years. $25—Two styles, in pretty, small checks; coat collar and back, trimmed with tinsel braid; the other has full front, shoulder straps, and belt of plain cloth, trimmed with tinsel braid.

Nothing in outer gear is so certain to catch a boy's fancy as the new military cape, with military brass buttons, and a most seductive military air. A hood falls over the shoulders; and both cape and hood are lined with red or bright plaids. Two new styles are here to-day.

Misses' Coats, 14, 16, 18 years. $6.50—Rough black cheviot, double-breasted front, high neck with storm collar, coat back; half lined with changeable silk.

For babies in their first few months, the wraps are of course of creamy white. A beautiful long coat of ripple eiderdown, with circular cape edged with Angora fur, is $4. Another of China silk, with deep cape of three embroidered ruffles, is $7.50; and a fine Bedford-cord, lined with China silk, braid-trimmed, is the same price.

Reviewing the past from these two opposite standpoints, the reader perceives clearly the causes and effects, the real relations between the different parts of the world's whole history. No wonder over fifty thousand sets have been sold at prices from $48 up. If everybody realized the life-long value of the great work we are distributing through the
