FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

Some Oriental Brass Work

Long before Ezekiel's time—Ezekiel, who tells in the burden of Tyre how "They traded vessels of brass in thy market"—Oriental brass work was famed. Only lately, though, have we Occidentals begun to appreciate to the full the decorativeness of its glinting lights, which throw out the colors of pottery so effectively and lend a brighter sparkle to polished table-tops.

Lamps, for table and floor, Damascened with silver; Algerian Smokers' sets, trays, jardinieres of various sizes—all of these last, perfect as decorations, because of their peculiarly golden hue.

The beautiful and complicated designs of the work—showing Solomon's sign, the star and crescent, the cups and keys of the Mameluke's shields—are as interesting as its color.

Every piece is a Christmas suggestion.
