

DAMAGED

MATERIAL

871120

Jeannette had prepared a splendid disguise for the character of a Spaniard, for the carnival which was approaching when her mother was taken sick. Far as he was concerned, she was a splendid success; she had received the highest honors of the carnival; she had been named "Queen of the Carnival." She had been the object of the admiration of all eyes, and she had been the cause of the envy of all hearts. She had been the center of attraction, and she had been the cause of the most brilliant success of her life. She had been the cause of the most brilliant success of her life. She had been the cause of the most brilliant success of her life.

She asked, as if merely to renew the conversation, "where does your mother reside?" Edward answered in St. Louis, and continued her embroidery. She asked, as if merely to renew the conversation, "where does your mother reside?" Edward answered in St. Louis, and continued her embroidery. She asked, as if merely to renew the conversation, "where does your mother reside?" Edward answered in St. Louis, and continued her embroidery.

ued he, but what adorns it most and will make me the happiest of men is concealed in the paper." She opened it confusedly. It was the

"Shades of Southern plantations and cotton factories," exclaimed Joe, as baby rooted its nose in about a mile, then

W of a Cana
a lad
to da
of th
Geru
"V
"Y
"V "S
"V
"N
"V
"Y
"G
"Y
"I hou
"T
"W "I same
"V "A mit d hind black
Th made ahead stairs
note
"any