

SPLURGING.

Going home from meeting... On Sunday eve... With your little dear one...

Lady in the gutter... An unpleasant sight... Thought I heard her mutter...

Want a little faster... Through the mud and rain... Thought it would be better...

The rain it kept on raining... The lightning lightened light... The thunder kept on roaring...

Just then she said "Good-bye, sir"... She didn't ask me in... Friends here no reply though...

ANNIE LAURIE... "If you want to hear Annie Laurie... sung, come to my house to-night..."

A Hundred Years Ago.

Although the hundredth year is an era in the life of a man which few are favored to see, a century is but a short period in the life of a nation.

Just one hundred years ago, Clive laid in India the colossal foundations of English power, and began that career of conquest which has made England to India what Spain was to Mexico and Peru.

Just one hundred years ago, the Seven Years War which began in the wilderness of America, was beginning to rage in Europe. It ended in the year 1765, after one of the most desperate struggles recorded in history.

The empire of the greater part of the New World was won. Its gallions still filled the royal treasury at Madrid with gold from its mines.

A hundred years ago, a Bourbon still sat upon the throne of France. The reign of feudalism and the degradation of the masses seemed established forever.

A hundred years ago, America was a wilderness, peopled beyond the central line of longitude of the States of New York and Pennsylvania, only by traders and trappers.
