

"Jones, the People's Man"

A DEPARTMENT CONDUCTED BY HIS FRIENDS.

Mark Your Ballot
Thus:

STOP AND THINK!

Forget for a moment, if you can, that you are a republican or a democrat, and ask yourself: Is it not time for me to be a free man to vote independently of the party bosses and vote for a man who truly represents all the interests of the people, therefore my interests? Is it not a fact that all public utilities should be publicly owned? Is it not detrimental to me and to all the people of the state, to allow a valuable franchise to be turned over to private parties to be operated to make money regardless of the welfare of the people whose franchise it is? Ought not the public at all times to retain such control of franchises as will accrue to the benefit of the whole, and protect them against the nefarious outrages constantly sought to be perpetrated on the public by scheming corporations? Think over these questions seriously and then ask yourself: What is my party doing to remedy these wrongs? Vote for Jones.

SENATOR HANNA'S FACE-ABOUT ON TRUSTS.

The position taken by Senator Hanna towards trusts in his speech in Star Turn hall on the South Side Wednesday evening has caused general comment and filled a large number of his Republican followers and associates with surprise and dismay. They "don't know where they are at," if the senator's language is to be taken as Republican doctrine. That he spoke advisedly and with full understanding of the effect of his words cannot for a moment be doubted. What, therefore, his astonishing change of position on the trust question portends is what troubles the Hanna Republican followers exceedingly, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A little over four months ago the Republican state convention was held in Columbus. It was Senator Hanna's convention. He owned it, body and breeches. In what manner he came to own it is well known history, and therefore not necessary to relate. It was a Hanna convention, and that is all need be said about it here.

Senator Hanna's state convention had something to say concerning trusts, and it said it in decidedly positive language. Trusts were declared to be "iniquitous and dangerous combinations" and "inimical to the interests of the people."

The party organs at once pulled out the trusts stop and played in loud accord with the note given by Senator Hanna's convention. The party spellbinders prepared speeches on the same line, and there was a general outburst of Republican denunciation of the "iniquitous and dangerous combinations" popularly known as trusts, throughout the state.

On Wednesday evening last Senator Hanna, the same Senator Hanna who owned and bossed the Republican state convention, which searched the dictionary for hard words to throw at the trusts, made a speech to a Republican gathering in this city and discussed trusts. He said, "These combinations known as trusts are not a political question at all." Mr. Hanna's state convention has made a leading political question of them.

"They are simply and purely a business question," says Mr. Hanna in October. "They are unlawful, iniquitous and dangerous," said Mr. Hanna's convention in June.

That there may be no charge of misrepresenting the position of Senator Hanna today, or that of Senator Hanna's convention last June, the deliverance of Mr. Hanna's Republican state convention last June, the deliverance of Mr. Hanna's Republican state convention on trusts is printed below, side by side with the trusts paragraphs from Senator Hanna's South Side speech last Wednesday evening.

HANNA STATE CONVENTION PLATFORM, JUNE 2, 1899.

We commend the action of the seventy-third general assembly of Ohio in passing the stringent law now on our statute books, prohibiting the organization of "trusts" and we denounce such unlawful combinations as inimical to the interests of the people.

We congratulate the people of the state upon the fact that a Republican legislature enacted this law and we demand its rigid enforcement.

We pledge our party to such further legislation as experience may determine necessary to prevent the formation and operation of such iniquitous and dangerous combinations.

HANNA SOUTH SIDE SPEECH, OCTOBER 18, 1899.

I want to discuss the question of trusts from the standpoint of a business man. It is conceded that every man has a right to do as he chooses with his own property, if he does not harm his neighbor. These combinations known as trusts are not political questions at all. They are simply and purely a business question.

They have the best men of the country at their head. We all believe in co-operation. I believe in their organization. They are along the same line as organizations of capital and labor—not to fight each other, but to help each other. It has been said that trusts are against your interest. That may be. But if they are you may depend upon the Republican party to look after that.

Nothing that has developed in the pending campaign has so unmistakably shown the fraud and pretense of partisan politics as the identical advice given the Ohio citizenship by the three leading political bosses of the state.

McLean is the undisputed boss of the Democratic party of Ohio. Hanna is the undisputed boss of the reigning faction of the Republican party in Ohio.

Foraker is the undisputed boss of the beaten and humiliated faction of the Republican party of Ohio.

Yet on the fundamental issue of Popular Rule vs. Boss Rule, their principles are the same.

Their partisan differences are a pretense and a sham. The Democratic leaders appeal to the people against the "high crimes and misdemeanors of the Republican administration as witnessed in the Philippines; they charge their opponents with "imperialism," with the ruthless exploitation of a people struggling for liberty, with cold-blooded murder, with acts which were scarcely paralleled by Alva and Weyer. They charge them with legislation that has fostered trusts and monopolies with an administration of law which has shown extreme partiality to the rich and brutal indifference to the poor.

The fraud and insincerity of it all are proved beyond question when the Republican bosses of the State beg the awakening people to vote the "traitors" and "copperheads" and "demagogues" into office, and when the chief Democratic boss begs them to vote the "murders" and "imperialists" and "robbers" and "plutocrats" into office, rather than elect the defender of popular rights, SAMUEL M. JONES.

Voters of Ohio, this is the situation! The issues upon which the bosses have divided you into two hostile armies are a confessed fraud—a fraud practiced for the purpose of lining you up each year to be plundered. What is your answer this year, '99?
