

The Wheat Crop of Ohio—A Philadelphia Correspondent—The Republican Convention—The Prospects of Freedom—Staubsville and Indiana Railroad—True Policy of Philadelphia

MARSHFIELD, O., July 14, 1855. Dear Times:—To your business men, the news of a heavy crop of wheat, oats, barley and rye, all over this young Empire of the west, is the most gratifying intelligence that can be conveyed to them.

In the vicinity of this thriving young city, lives our late fellow-townsmen, Col. T. S. Webb—on a large and elegant farm. Here, as in Philadelphia, he is characterized by his affability, energy and public spirit—his profuse hospitality and fine social qualities.

Happening in Columbus on the day of the Republican Convention, I looked in upon the assemblage. I see your telegraphic despatch calls it a "Free Soil Convention." This is not altogether correct.

The assemblage was composed of Whigs, Americans, Free Soilers and Democrats, who, last year, (and adopted the name of Republican), and by so doing carried the entire Congressional Delegation, as also electing the State ticket by near one hundred thousand majority.

It is understood that all the candidates are Americans, with one exception, and he sympathetic with that party.

Among the candidates is Capt. Thomas H. Ford, for Lieut. Governor, who made a bold, brave speech, in the late American National Convention held in your city.

The Right Sort of a Wife. During the late dreadful tornado which passed over the Mississippi, tearing up trees, blowing down houses and killing cattle, an incident occurred near Paulding, in that State, which is worthy of record.

A young married couple were alone in the forest, occupants of a new home, and distant two miles from the nearest neighborhood. They had retired to rest, and were absorbed in slumber when the roar of the hurricane came, like a sonorous warning through the primal trees, and the fierce winds struck the house, tumbling the logs around them.

A matter too little understood, I fear, by your business men, now claims their immediate attention. I allude to the Steubenville and Indiana Railroad. It is now completed from Steubenville, on the Ohio River, to Newark, and at the latter place, connects with the Sandusky Railroad, running with the legion of roads of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois.

The shipment of flour and grain, alone to New York city, is the great cause of its prosperity. By simply bridging the Ohio at Steubenville, one and a-half millions of barrels of flour will pass over, annually, that and the Pennsylvania Railroad from Ohio alone.

Beauty has but little to do with engaging the love of woman. The air, the manner, the tone, the conversation, the something that interests, and the something to be proud of; these are the attributes of the man bound to be loved.

From the German. Living by One's Wits. Nine persons sailed from Basel, down the Rhine. A Jew who wished to go to Shalunip, was allowed to come on board and journey with them, on condition that he would conduct himself with propriety, and give the captain eighteen kreutzers for his passage.

Now it is true something ginged in the Jew's pocket when he struck his hand against it; but the only money there was, therein, was a twelve kreutzer piece, for the other was a brass button. Notwithstanding this, he accepted the offer with gratitude.

Among the many anecdotes of Mr. Webster, there is one which, though reflecting slightly upon his negligence of pecuniary matters, is still very Websterian in its wit.

On one occasion it is related that he was the guest of the Southern Senators and Representatives in the city of Washington, and they passed many compliments upon him, and alluded frequently to his being like the Southerners in his habits and feelings, and it was all an accident that he was born in New Hampshire.

The proposal pleased the company; and hoping to divert themselves with the Jews wit or stupidity, each asked, at random whatever entered his head.

Hope paves the golden way to bliss, and cheerfulness is the lamp that lights the beautiful walk.

Rest.—Is there one word in the whole vocabulary more precious in its import, to the "tired denizens" of this working world, than this little monosyllable—rest? Man of labor, child of toil, tell us.

To Keep Flies from Horses.—These noble animals are often greatly afflicted while on the road, or in the field, by flies, which annoy them continually during their task-work, and which prove a source of no little perplexity to the teamster by rendering them intractable and restive while in the gear.

The Prohibitory Law in New York.—There have been large numbers of arrests for drunkenness in New York city, Brooklyn and other towns throughout the State. The course of the magistrates under the law is very plain, yet there seems to be quite a difference of construction among them in regard to the manner of proceeding under it.

That Last Bad Act.—"That last bad act," so repeated a mother, as she stood over the corpse of her boy, who was brot home to her from the pond where he had been to bathe.
