MORNING LEADER.

From London (Penny) INTS ABOUT OSSERS. BY A DISCIPLE OF MR. BARTY.

Of the rare birds of the air I have seen, I have seen the rarest of them all.

There was a certain bird, a very rare bird, that I have seen.

My friend says, "What bird is that?" I say, "It is a rare bird."

But with all his wit, and wit he is not, he has not seen the bird.

Oh! if you see the bird, please to let me know, for I will give you a reward.

My friend says, "I will give you a reward." I say, "I will give you a reward."

But with all his wit, and wit he is not, he has not seen the bird.

Oh! if you see the bird, please to let me know, for I will give you a reward.

My friend says, "I will give you a reward." I say, "I will give you a reward."

But with all his wit, and wit he is not, he has not seen the bird.

THE YOUTHFUL VOYAGERS.

A Thrilling Story. [Continued.] Night—Dark, wild and gloomy, night came down on the world of waters.

It was a dark, stormy night, and the sea was very rough. The wind was blowing from the north.

The ship was pitching and rolling, and the crew were very nervous. The captain was on the deck, looking at the sea.
