

UNCLE BENJAMIN'S SERMON. Not many hours ago I heard Uncle Benjamin discussing this matter to his son, who was complaining of pressure.

"Hely upon it, Sammy," said the old man, "be leaned on his staff, with his gray locks flowing in the breeze of a May morning, murmuring pays no bids. I have been an observer for these fifty years, and I have never seen a man helped out of a hole by cursing his horses."

"Aye," cried Sammy, "you may say that, and a mother-in-law, and two apprentices into the bargain; and I should like to know what a poor man is to learn here, when the great scholars at Harvard at Harvard, and can't tell for their lives what has become of the hoard money."

"Softly, Sammy, I am older than you; I have not got these gray hairs and this crooked back without some hard days of Continental money, when my grand-father used to stuff a sulky box with bill to pay for a yearling, or a wheat fan, and when the Jersey women used thorns for pins, and laid their teapots away in the garret. You wish to know what you can learn? You may learn these seven things:

1. That you have saved too little, and spent too much. I never thought you to be a miser, but I have seen you giving your dollar for a notion, when you might have laid one half of it aside for charity, and one half aside for a rainy day.

2. That you have gone too much upon credit. I always told you that credit was a show. There is a substance behind which cast the shadow, but a small body may cast a greater shadow, and no wiser man will follow the shadow any further than he can see the substance. You may now learn that you have followed and been deceived into a bog.

3. That you have been in too much haste to become rich. Slow and easy wins the race.

4. That no course of life can be depended upon as always prosperous. I am afraid the younger race of working men in America have a notion that no body will go to ruin, on this side of the water. Providence has very greatly blessed us, and we have become presumptuous.

5. That you have not been thankful enough to God for his benefits in past times.

6. That you may be thankful your lot is not worse. We might have famine, or pestilence, or war, or tyranny, or altogether.

And lastly, to end my sermon, you may learn to offer with more understanding the prayer of your infancy:—Give us this day our daily bread. The old man ceased, and Sammy put on his apron, and told Dick to blow away at the forge bellows.
