J. A. DICKER, Lt. Sergeant.
[Gazette and Journal copy.]

John H. Shank was elected on Saturday to fill the vacancy in the Council from the 3d Ward. He is a live, practical gentleman, and we greet him.

In Session.—The Institute of the Montgomery County Teachers' Association met this morning at the South West District School house. There were over forty members in attendance! This is the largest number ever yet convened at the opening meeting; and the number and spirit manifested give an earnest of what may be expected from the labors of these "guardians of our youth." We are really gratified to make this mention, and are confident that we will have a good report to make of their deliberation and action. We will have a report of their doings to-morrow.

DEATH OF A MINISTER.—Pardon H. Hencke, well and favorably known in the Miami Valley for many years as a good man and a successful minister of Christ, died suddenly at his residence near Mansburg on Saturday evening last. He was interred this morning at 10 o'clock, at the Mansburg Cemetery. His funeral was very numerously attended.

We are requested to say that the Committee of the Dayton National Horse Show will meet at the Phillips House this evening to make arrangements connected with the successful getting up of the approaching Fair.

We are pleased to announce that the work of fixing the grounds on the farm of Mr. Kiser is rapidly progressing. The Fair will be one of the greatest attractions ever presented in the West. We hope our business men generally will cheerfully assist the Committee.

CHILD DESTRUCTION.—On Saturday afternoon last, a lady seen to emerge from a stable belonging to Mr. Bailey, in the rear of Main street, Xenia, and proceed directly to the L. M. R. R. train, which was on the point of going south. Soon afterward, the cries of an infant attracted the attention of the people in the neighborhood, and Mrs. Washington Ridd, in company with another lady, proceeded to the stable, where they found a little child, well wrapped, and a note, written in an neat hand, and containing the following, lying down beside the child:

"Good Ladies—When you get this babe, it will have no mother. Take care of it, and God will reward you. His name is Allie, and he is three weeks old."

The stable in which the woman deposited little "Allie," contained a horse, and several hogs; but they were secured. The child is said to be very pretty, and we learn several ladies in Xenia are anxious to adopt it.

Since writing the above, a gentleman from Xenia informs us that the mother of the child was discovered in Morrow, on the L. M. Road, and that she was brought to Xenia this morning. She is said to be a single lady, who has heretofore moved in the "higher circles."

MAKING AWAY WITH IT.—On last Tuesday a mulatto man came over to this city with Conductor Nichols, having with him a very young child, which he said was just left an orphan by the death of his wife; and that he was going to Richmond, Va., to some of his friends for the purpose of having them take care of the child.

On Saturday last the Marshal of Xenia was over here in search of a mulatto, who it was charged, had "made away with a new born child." As near as we could learn the case was this: The mulatto had recently married a widow woman at Xenia, who had a daughter nearly grown. It seems, however, that he had better married the daughter, as on last Monday she gave birth to a child, of which she affirms he is the father. The mulatto says that the child is safe, and that he can produce it. We presume its production will satisfy the ends of justice, although it will not at all contribute to the domestic quiet of the family.—Xenia is a great place for irregular additions to the census.

By reference to a military notice, it will be seen that we are to be favored with a flying visit from the National Guard, of Indianapolis, on to-morrow afternoon.—They are said to be a fine looking corps, and very inch soldiers. The Light Guard will receive them in handsome style. We learn they will attend the military encampment at Troy which commences to-morrow.

We learn (from the Journal) that O. A. Lysons, Esq., formerly of this city, and now residing in New York, is in the city. We are glad to hear that he is in excellent health.

Some of our friends find fault with us, but do not answer the daily scandal heaped at the Democratic party, through the medium of a combined opposition press. It is true, that we publish a political paper; but we are at the same time trying to make it a readable and respectable one, and have reason to believe that our efforts in that particular are approved. But if we should undertake to answer the books of calumny being voluted upon us in the manner they deserve, we would be compelled to sink the standard of the Empire far below the point where respectability and popularity part company. You cannot successfully compete with backsliders, without, to some extent at least, making one of yourself. Our taste does not lead us into that kind of controversy.

It is very true, as we have already stated, that we are publishing a political paper; and we are warmly attached to the principles it advocates; but that is no reason why we should fill our columns with political baldheadedness to the disgust of the general reader. In short, our design is to print a paper that shall be reliable in political as well as other matters. Our aim is to give our patrons the truth on all subjects, and not deceive them in any thing. If we fail in this at any time, it is because we do not our self properly conceive the real points of fact and issue.

We think we can point out the errors of our opponents without exhausting the vocabulary of biliousness. We regard the majority of political opponents as intelligent men, but honest in error. We believe that "error may be corrected as long as reason is left free to combat it." "Truth crushed to earth will rise again." So, it is with the principles we advocate; their truthfulness may be smothered for a time by the wily, designing politician, but they are the principles of our fathers, and of the Constitution. Their promulgation by the Democracy has made us independent, has made our country and our people free and happy. An honest adherence to them in future, will shed the same blessings upon millions yet unborn.

We trust therefore, that our friends will see the propriety of our course at once. It cannot be that the unfair course pursued by the opposition press, will all inure to the advantage of those parties. Their ruinous dogmas will fall harmless at the feet of justice, and will ultimately recoil upon their projectors with crushing force.

The time has gone by, we think, when political victories may be gained by stratagem, and scandalous perversion of truth. For our part we shall steadily pursue the path we have marked out, so that we may "be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh us a reason of the hope that is in us;" a hope based upon the intelligence, honesty and patriotism of our people.

We were laboring under the impression that our friend of the Gazette not only asserted that Judge Ranney had been a fugitive-slave law fanatic, but that he was really one. This impression was somewhat strengthened by the fact that we had not observed any thing in the charge which indicated that Ranney had changed his mind. But we stand corrected, on the basis of the explanation just made for our special information. This, however, does not reach the difficulty. Competent and sufficient proof has followed the denial that Judge Ranney has ever been a transgressor of the fugitive law. That is the point. And here we would inform our neighbor that obedience to the law does not imply anything like an anxiety to engage in negro catching. There seems to be a discrimination in this matter that the Gazette does not take into the account in referring to those who maintain the supremacy of all statute laws.

A little meditation upon some of the points in the fugitive law controversy will, we believe, convince our neighbor that some of his positions are not well taken; are contradictory with some he has heretofore avowed, and to which the Germantown Independent took exception; that flippant charges against people differing from him upon questions of policy are not in good taste, and are, not really, conclusive evidence that he is right, and they are wrong; that gentlemen are not, certainly, the criminals his thoughtless language would seem to indicate.

HEALTH OFFER TO EVERY FAMILY.—It will be seen from Dr. Chamberlin's well advertised treatise, that he proposes to give a series of lectures, explanatory of his electrical theory of life, health and disease in connection with a full exposition of his wonderful discovery for the cure of all diseases. The subject of medical electricity has for ages attracted the attention of physicians and electricians, and various have been the means resorted to, for the extraction and application of this mysterious agent for the cure of disease. Theory has supplanted the fact, and in fact every thing connected with the subject seemed confused and mysterious till the recent discovery of Dr. Chamberlin, which solves the problems and is the great therapeutic agent, not only in a few diseases, as has generally been conceded, but for all maladies to which flesh is heir. Dr. C.'s rooms are daily thronged with patients, who speak in the most flattering terms of his mode of treating disease, and during his short stay in Dayton he has restored several persons to health who had been prostrated with disease for years.

By a dispatch from Cleveland Thursday, we learn that notes were entered in the cases of Sam. Davis and J. K. Lowe, Western Office officers arrested through the instrumentality of the Oberlin fanatics for executing the Fugitive Law.

Comparisons are certainly odious, if we institute them between the weather of last Monday—the 4th—and to-day. We believe we need say nothing more in this connection.

We again call the attention of the trustees of the 4th ward to the bad condition of the Warren St. Bridge. It ought to be repaired.

A great many people were out of the city in the groves adjacent, yesterday. The heat in town was almost intolerable.

The Probate Court commenced its June term to-day. A great deal of business will be before the Court this term.

F. A. Spang was admitted to bail on Saturday evening last, in the sum of $300.

The Brunswick Telegraph gives in that it is immoral—that "her son never sets."

Porter's Spirit says.—The rumor which has been widely spread about that a new match has been made between Flora Temple and Princess, at mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for ten thousand a side, is not true. Flora is so severely injured by the wounds she has received, in her late harness trot that she will not be well in two weeks to come.

Suburban Drives.
There is no more inviting attraction to a city than "Suburban Drives." We have frequently heard tourists say:—"It is a very nice place, a delightful retreat for a week or a month during the 'heated term,' but then one has always to remain in town, or drive out upon unshaded avenues, in the hot sunshine, through clouds of stragling dust." We are compelled to acknowledge that this objection holds rather too hard against our City.

We are not starting out with a recommendation of a heavy bill of expense upon our city or county; we propose, however, to recommend the opening of "drives" in this vicinity. All will admit that they would be of immensely pleasant to our citizens, but that they would prove a very strong attraction to strangers visiting our city, who now justly complain that we have no pretty drives in our vicinity. When we can prevail upon gentlemen in the suburbs to open up "natural avenues" from one road to another across their farms—convenient to themselves and the public—we may expect to have Dayton one of the most inviting summer resorts for tourists to be found in the land. The expense of these avenues would be little in proportion to the great benefits to be derived from their use.

We have not time to-day to pursue this subject as we would like. We will briefly allude to what might be accomplished in one direction; while we hope we will call up an interest from other points in the vicinage.

Nearly all the strangers who visit us have heard of our Cemetery, and of the Asylum about half a mile south east of it, and would like to visit them. Woodland, the beautiful home of the dead, being the stronger attraction, they give orders to drive there first.

After they have spent a pleasant hour in those consecrated grounds, they express desire to visit the Asylum and grounds, when they are informed that they will have to drive back over the same dusty road to the city, take a fresh start and then drive over an exceedingly dusty road to the Asylum—a point only half a mile from the City where they were an hour before! The visitor will ask: "Why could not an avenue be cut through from the eastern part of the Cemetery to Wayne Avenue, and an hour of dusty travel be avoided, for those who would be pleased to visit the two prominent attractions in our vicinity? As it is, we have but little time to spare: we would be glad to visit both these, but as the annoyances are so great, we will have to content ourselves with a view of but one place." We have heard this question asked by visitors an hundred times; and we have heard the question seriously considered at home.

We have to say this: At the eastern verge of the Cemetery grounds, and exactly opposite the entrance to the "City Lot" from Wayne Avenue, Nature has made a passage-way up the hill into the Cemetery; it is an easy ascent up a gentle slope, and with a very little work—simply the grading of a carriage track, will afford a proper passage for vehicles from Wayne Avenue into the City of the Dead. This avenue would enter into the "new drive" now being put around the Cemetery, just at the top of the hill, and would afford a continuous, pleasant drive from the City to the Asylum, via Woodland!

The right of way from Wayne Avenue to the Cemetery lot can be obtained at small cost, we are informed. The expense of a gate with a handsome arch, and a porter's lodge at the entrance would not be much. As it is, additional help seems to be needed at the Cemetery, and during the day, the east as well as the west gate would receive all necessary attention at the hands of the Sexton and assistants. At proper time in the evening these gates could be secured, and the services of a porter at the eastern entrance dispensed with until the next day. Now the construction of this avenue is feasible; and we hope to see it effected.

There are other "drives" in the same vicinity we might mention, but we will barely allude to one. Nearly opposite the Asylum, and north of and adjoining the residence of Dr. Egly, and on the line of Mr. Edgar, an avenue could be opened across on his line and the line of Mr. J. Patterson, past the Mission School, to the old road at Patterson's Mill. It would make a delightful and shady drive; and if we are correctly informed it could be secured for a mere trifle. Messrs. Edgar and Patterson would doubtless grant a carriage way of 50 feet for the purpose, and we feel sure that the funds for fencing and putting it in order, could be secured at once on subscription. We are willing to presume pretty heavily upon the known liberality and appreciativeness of the gentleman named, and we are well enough acquainted with our citizens to know that they would cheerfully subscribe the amount necessary to put the projected avenue in good trim.

We have only hinted at the subject, and will recur to it again. We hope to awaken our citizens to the importance of getting up "drives" in this vicinity, and offering attractions to those who would, if we had these, make Dayton a place of Summer resort instead of other places which, in themselves, do not inspire the four the inducements. Get up drives—they can be gotten up cheaply—in every direction, and let it be known every where that we have them in the vicinity, and we warrant that our city will become a resort for multitudes during the Summer months.

As evidence from the hospitality, urbanity, and intelligence of the inhabitants, and the health of the place, and the facilities for reaching it; the greatest desideratum to tourists. Let the "Suburban Drive" subject be agitated.

(Ohio White Sulphur Correspondence.)
Onto White Sulphur Springs,
July 11th, 1859.

I was waked up the other morning in a very singular manner. The birds who have built their nest near my window, and in whose welfare I have already learned to take a great interest, aroused me before my waked time by the loud cries and shrieks they were uttering over one of their unfortunates, which, in attempting some foothold upon the tree, and was lying helpless on the ground. It was just at break of day, and I was terribly sleepy and not at all disposed to get up, but if I waited for my usual hour of rising some prowling cat or wandering cur from a neighboring farm house might come along, and put an untimely end to birdie's first excursion from the paternal premises, so that there was no other alternative but to dress myself and go down and rescue the youngster, who by this time pretty well frightened and seemed sufficiently punished by his carelessness and probable disobedience. Having succeeded in placing him in a position of safety, apparently to his own great satisfaction, and the relief of his parents, whose gratitude I know I merited, I proceeded to take a morning walk, which I enjoyed so much that I secretly determined to steal away from my friends that day and spend a few hours in solitude.

Accordingly, just after dinner, I slipped around back of the howling alley, which stands on the bank of the Scioto, walked leisurely along until I was out of sight, and then hurrying rapidly down the river a half a mile, threw myself into a boat which I knew there was waiting for me. I thought the thing very cleverly done and took great credit to myself for my adroitness, and as I pushed out from shore, I fairly chuckled at the thought of the inquiries which would be made for me, and the surprise which would be manifested at my absence at the little picnic we were going to have up in the grove that afternoon. There is an solitude you can have nowhere but in solitude. You are tired of society altogether; you do not want to see any body, talk to any body or hear any body, but you desire to be alone, away off by yourself, where you can forget that there is any other person in existence. Eye of me, are all you care about having any thing to do with, and the mood they are in is generally so similar to your own that you will not quarrel together.— This is the way I felt on the afternoon in question, and I stood a fair chance of being gratified. The country along the river is, in some places, as wild as the primeval forest, and as the oars rose and fell in the crystal stream and the rocky bottom looked up into my face I could have believed that I was a thousand miles beyond the pale of civilization. How delightful it is on a hot day to let your boat glide in alone close to the shore, where the overhanging branches sweep to the water. The deeply shaded woods, which line the Western bank of the Scioto, seem, by some natural predisposition, to stretch their great arms over the river as if in protection. In one place the branches bent down in such regular succession that for more than half a mile I passed through a leafy arcade, where not a single patch of sunshine bestraggled the water.— The cool shade and grassy bank offered too great an attraction to be resisted, so I landed at the foot of a mighty sycamore, threw the oar around one of the roots and having climbed up to the rocky shore, found myself in the midst of an original forest. The underbrush was so thick that it was impossible to see more than twenty or thirty feet. The trunks of trees which had fallen years ago, lay rotting undisturbed, and the whole wood was pervaded by a solitude as of the grave. It was oppressive to me, so that after penetrating a few hundred feet and sitting awhile on a fallen log looking up into the trees, whose matted tops excluded any glimpse of the sky, I was fain to return to the river bank again. It was like stepping from the tomb out into life and daylight and I felt relieved.

I threw myself on the grass and lay for hours looking at the fleecy clouds which were fairly floating up in the blue heavens. The solemn stillness was unbroken by the slightest sound. I suppose it was owing to the heat of the day, for not even a cricket was chirping. The universal silence, the unbroken forest behind me, and the deep blue heavens above, were all calculated to inspire the soul with a boundless emotion, and I lay dreaming until the fading sunshine and the long shadows thrown across the water, warned me of the approach of the evening.

I released my boat and swept out from under the overhanging branches just as the sun went down and the shades of night began to gather round. The evening was very still, and in going up stream nothing could be heard save the measured splash of the oars, the croaking of frogs or the deep boom of the bittern sounding from some sandy shallow. Sunlight had given place to moonlight, before the boat was beached and I would have considered the excursion as an extremely pleasant man, had it not been for a slight accident which I ought perhaps to mention. On the way up by an awkwardness altogether inexcusable I upset the boat the consequence of which was that I was not in a very suitable plight to be seen until I paid a visit to my own apartments.— Could I accomplish that successfully, a few minutes would remedy every difficulty but if I was discovered, it would spoil the pretty little story I had framed of my afternoon's adventures. Having threaded my way thro' the trees and among the cottages on the White Sulphur grounds, until I got near my own room, I was congratulating myself on my success, when around the corner of the building came—well, no matter who. Suffice, to say that I have not heard the last of my boat ride yet.

HEAVY WARD BECKER.—The Brooklyn Daily Times publishes the following:
"So constant and lavish is the adulation bestowed by Mr. Becker's admirers on all he says and does, that we verily believe that if the 'Star Presser' suffered the agonies of delirium tremens, and his sayings were taken down by a stenographer and published, they would be received, read and valued by his admirers as pure Gospel."

Tax Work or Tax Done.—We give below the work of the dogs in six counties in Ohio:— In wood growing regions, in other portions of the State, the "work" has been equally well performed by the canines:

In Greene county, sheep killed by dogs 1,069 value $2,429; injured 930, value 675.

In Summit county, sheep killed by dogs 539, value $1,729; injured 907, value 678.

In Muskingum, sheep killed by dogs 1,056, value $3,454; injured 786, value 673.

In Champaign county, 692 sheep were killed in 1858 by dogs, and 564 injured, involving a loss of $4,189.

The sheep killed by dogs in Lorain county in 1858, numbered 432, of the value of $991; injured 158, value $205.

During the year 1858, there were killed in Lake County, by dogs, 412 sheep, valued at $743. There were also 100 sheep injured, valued at $140.

The Wool growers intend holding a Convention, "open to the world," in Cleveland, next month. We hope they will propose something practical in the way of getting clear of the thousands of worthless cur in State. Let them resolve to do something, and then do it.

A French magistrate, speaking for his love of the pleasures of the table, noted one day to a friend, said:

"We have just been eating a superb turkey. It was excellent, stuffed with truffles to the neck, tender, delicate, and of a high flavor. We left only the bones."

"How many of you were there?" said his kind friend.

"Two," replied the magistrate. "Yes, the turkey and myself."

It is estimated that the recent battle of Magenta has created at least twenty thousand widows and sixty thousand orphans.

The Austrian press in Vienna and other cities rejoice exceedingly over the downfall of Lord Dufferin, because he was so obstinately neutral.

It has been recommended that the next State Convention of the American party of Maryland be held in Baltimore on the 10th of August.

It is now ascertained that the Emperor of Austria reached Milan just in time to learn the defeat of his army, and to assist in the evacuation of Milan. That was not the entertainment to which he invited himself.

The Havana correspondent of the Charleston Courier, under date of the 25th, writes that the yellow fever is making some progress among the shipping there. Thus far we hear nothing of this disease at New Orleans.

Accounts from Washington say that the remains of the late Dr. Gamaliel Bailey, who recently died on his way to Europe, arrived in Washington on the morning of July 3, and the funeral services took place at Trinity Church on the 5th inst.

The St. Catharine's, C. W. Post states that a man fell down an embankment in that city, a few days since, and was killed.— The coroner's jury just sat upon the body rendered a verdict of willful murder against the Street Committee and other members of the Corporation for leaving the place unguarded.

Franco de Munn, a colored man, was eating ice cream on the corner of the Bowery street and Main street, New York, on 4th when John Matthes, another man, dropped a pack of light fire crackers into de Munn's pocket which caused a flask of powder therein to explode. Both men were seriously injured.

The Roman correspondent of the London Weekly Register writes that her Majesty Queen Victoria has forwarded an autograph letter to the Pope, thanking his Holiness for his present of a beautiful mosaic. It is added that the Pope was much gratified with the friendly sentiment expressed by her Majesty.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.
Owing to numerous solicitations from Ladies and Gentlemen of Dayton, Dr. Chamberlin has consented to give a series of Lectures and Conversations on the Electrical Laws of Life, Health and Disease. Also, a full exposition of his important discovery in the application of Electricity for the cure of all Diseases. He will likewise explain the reasons why most men and others have used this subtle agent with so little success. Particulars can be learned by calling at his Office, No. 256, Third street.

Dr. Chamberlin has cured and is curing, a class of Diseases, that has set at defiance the most potent remedies of the medical profession, from all ages of the world. The Diseased are invited to call and learn the particulars. DR. CHAMBERLIN.
