This beautiful poem is spoken of by the Boston Trawler as 'one of those melodious and spiritual lyrics which occasionally find their way into the New Journal, from the pen of James G. Clark, and which are rendering the name of the author dear to the lovers of true poetry.'

And a wail fell o'er me and great... I think the Great Father for this...

By the light of this sun I sought... I have loved from the cold world apart...

Learn, look forth, and behold... I go but weep not o'er my tomb...

Yet deeply these memories burn... I would ever be true to you...

How the Moxy Comes... Queen John has sung his ancient song...

How does it come? Why, 'tis the... I was a child, and I have been...

How low it comes! Why, 'tis because... It comes by trials, as well as toil...

How low it comes! Why, 'tis because... I was a child, and I have been...

THE OHIO STATESMAN

My worst anticipations as to the assumption of power by this Convention have been realized...

It has elected delegates to the Provisional Government of the Confederate States at Montgomery...

It has appointed military officers and agents under its standard authority.

It has declared by ordinance that the people of Texas, under the Constitution of the Provisional Government of the Confederate States...

I have declared my determination to stand by Texas in whatever she may determine...

I may not be sustained now, but when millions of our countrymen, upon the United States, shall be called upon...

I love Texas too well to bring civil strife and bloodshed upon her. To avert this calamity...

I do not expect the consequences of my refusal to take this oath...

I profess in the name of the people of Texas against all the wrong doings of this Convention...

It has accomplished its mission, and its chief object has been fulfilled...

Judge Norton was solemn, stern and dignified in tone. He was also at once egotistical and sensitive to ridicule...
