WAR TAXES Are Not Usually as Heavy as "Negligence Taxes!"

While the Nations are devising forms of war taxes calculated to raise revenues with the least possible hardships to the people, individuals continue to impose upon themselves far heavier taxes that are not at all necessary, and that serve no useful purpose whatever.
The "negligence tax" is the heaviest tax in the world, and it is self-imposed, and always paid!
The work-hunter who fails to advertise persistently pays a negligence tax which can be ill-afforded.
And the owner of property who allows a vacancy to become "chronic" pays a daily negligence tax which could be stopped at any time by some aggressive classified advertising. This tax often amounts enough to rent any good property anywhere, would cost.
