"SUCH A CARE." "I heard her say, speaking of children, yesterday. 'Such a care, such a care.' If all the gladness of their ways is worth the pain of parting, what gladness will she have some day. I think I better not say so. A joy that is so soon to go, and that is so soon to be parted from, is not a joy at all. Whether or not she'll say so out well, with all her care, you cannot tell. How far their feet shall go, or how long they'll stay, or how long I'll be of mine should stain my name."
