My Husband and I

By Jane Phelps. Disturbing Ideas. CHAPTER IV. "Don't you get terribly lonely, Mrs. Randall?" Mrs. Thurston asked...

"Yes, I really have been here before, and really I am a little timid about getting out alone..."

"You must go out more. You are a stranger in New York, aren't you?"

"Yes, I really have been here before, and really I am a little timid about getting out alone..."

"All men are alike in that I guess," she returned...

"Oh, I couldn't think of dragging Tom— Mr. Randall— out just because I wanted to go if he were tired..."

"How long have you been married, Mrs. Randall?" she asked...

"A little over a month," I confessed blushing...

"Wait until you have passed the turtle-diving stage, and you'll talk very differently..."

"That means that you would, all right, Sir, if they are the right kind..."

"Really would you?" I asked, as I threw my arms around his neck...

"That's nice. It must be lonely for you here all alone all day long..."

"Well, Sir, what have you been doing with yourself?" Tom asked...

"Oh, that pretty woman across the hall, her name is Thurston, called on me today..."

Bennie's Notebook

Mo and Puds Skinkin and Leroy Shooster was standing around the lam post yesterday afternoon...

There's one 2 blocks away and one about 6 blocks away...

2 blocks away, and Puds and the man said...

There's only 2 of us here, and we came to the dentist...

Clear out, said the dentist, meaning us 5 fellows...

This is no side show, said the dentist, meaning I myself...

It is an exceedingly unfavorable way for the stock market...

During this way the mind should be safe-guarded against despondency...

Saturday again bodes ill for the age and for all the past...

Uranus is in a place supposed to have a very sinister effect upon the mind...

A great fire of incendiary bombs is prognosticated...

There is a sign read as afflicting college-bred men and women...
