TROOPS SLAY AMERICANS

Charge Made That Federal Soldiers Kill Rooney and Boles at Tampico.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 14.—Stories of terrible cruelty, unredressed murders and devastation of properties were given the senate subcommittee investigating the Mexican situation today by men yet in close touch with conditions in Mexico.

W. McMillan, a cattleman from a border town; James J. Britt, a lawyer from Tampico and George E. Blalock, once the head of what was the largest colony of American farmers in Mexico and who now is operating a small grocery store here, were the witnesses. The effect of their testimony was to strengthen the claim of witnesses heard in Washington only two days ago. He is one of the men who assisted in caring for the bodies of F. J. Rooney and Earl Boles who were killed in the oil fields on December 30. The three had dined together on Christmas day.

Britt appeared confident that the men were killed by Carranza's soldiers. "They were killed within the Carranza line," he said, "and the bullets we took from their bodies were those used by the government soldiers and not by the bandits. Moreover, after he had been brought to the ground by a bullet in his ankle, had been attacked from behind by a man with a machete. The blade had been thrust far into his body, turned downwards and the man up again. The blade in that part of the country do not carry machetes. The soldiers do."

His theory that the killing was done by soldiers was further supported by telling how the sergeant of one of the oil companies who looks like Rooney did, received permission about the same time the two had left to carry a certain amount of money into the oil fields. This information was transmitted to the Carranzistas. Britt believed those who killed Rooney and Boles believed they were killing the paymaster and someone else.

He told the committee the Americans stood guard over the bodies until an autopsy could be held. "We had one exception of neglecting that phase of such a case," he said, "when James Wallace was shot. I know for a fact he was not a drinking man and yet the claim set up by the Mexicans was that he was drunk. And this is what had happened. He had poured the liquor into his mouth and over his face after he was dead and then the odor might support their claim."

"Only an American." Reference to the killing of Gabriel Porter, whose father lives here, was made by the witness. "Who was he?" inquired Senator Fall. "Only an American," was the reply. The answer characterized the bitterness of his entire testimony. His attorney, William C. Garrera, Gabrera

WOOD IN WASHINGTON

Meets Republican Leaders—Favors Adjustment of Funston Claims Before House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood appeared today before the house committee on war claims in connection with the bill authorizing compensation for the buildings who constructed buildings and other structures expended money in connection with amusement enterprises at Camp Funston, Kan., where his command and who suffered when the leaves were terminated. He favored adjustment of such losses in some cases.

The leaves were for a five-year period and the enterprises were operated by the department of camp activities. Under the bill of Representative Strong, republican, Kansas, the secretary of war would be authorized to settle claims at his discretion.

While he was at the capitol, General Wood called on Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican senate leader, and also on Senator Nelson, republican, Minnesota. The latter said they had talked over old times. William Cooper Proctor, manager of the Wood presidential campaign, who accompanied the officer, called on Senator Harding, republican, Ohio.

Article by Leader of the I. W. W. Is Presented as Evidence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Further and more determined efforts to bring about ratification of the peace treaty is expected to follow the selection tomorrow by democratic senators of a leader to succeed the late Senator Martin of Virginia.

Senatorial conferences today were devoted exclusively to the leadership race between Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, administration manager in the treaty contest, and Senator Underwood of Alabama, former democratic leader in the house. The democrats meet in caucus tomorrow before the senate convenes to make their choice, with an extremely close contest in prospect.

Managers of the Hitchcock and Underwood campaigns, which both parties claim victory, agreed tonight that the democratic membership was very evenly divided and one vote might decide the contest. Effect of the democratic leadership election on the treaty is predicted on various positions taken recently by Senators Hitchcock and Underwood on ratification. Although both have urged unreservedly for the treaty, Underwood declared several days ago that, if unable to secure complete ratification, he would support a resolution of partial ratification, excluding the league of nations covenant and leaving it for settlement in the fall elections. Senator Hitchcock has opposed such a course. Another factor is the authorship of Senator Underwood's pending motion for appointment of a senate committee on conciliation.

Supporters of Senator Hitchcock urge his election as an endorsement of his personal leadership in bringing the treaty to a close, since the death of Senator Martin. They also emphasize that his defeat might be construed as repudiation of the administration policy as regards the treaty.
