PLEA FOR SCHOOLS.

An hundred years ago Napoleon took time amid his many wars and troubles to study out a plan of education for the children of France. His idea was to educate the youth from the primary grades up to the university, but with the one idea of making them soldiers and public officials.

We of Oklahoma, like all America, have gone beyond that idea in our civilization, and we must educate on higher lines than Napoleon planned. Our state must have a complete system from the kindergarten to the polytechnic institute, or to the university.

Our educational system should lead from the bottom up to one of the great plans of life, and there should be a standard that would guarantee a certain education, grade by grade. The sole end and intention of all schools is to teach the pupil. All else is mere trimmings.

And it must not be so that the public schools must take the crumbs that fall from the table when the matter is up for appropriations from the legislature. The public schools will need the most help and must get it. The legislature should make the common schools first. Then, in the matter of appropriations, take up other items as they come.

OKLAHOMA FARMS AND RESTRICTIONS.

No matter how many immigrants come to Oklahoma, very few of them will work on the farms unless they intend to own the farm. This is a fact. And this is why Congress should remove the Indians' restrictions. We have vast acres of land that could be profitably cultivated if we had the farmers here. We could not get the farmers here very readily if they could own their own homes.

There are, of course, a great many farmers here already, a great many industrious, hard-working and money-making farmers, but they make their money by their individual effort. Labor is scarce. Of course there is no profit without labor. But with good labor the farmers could do so much better. The negro will not work on the farms. Year by year they leave the farms and crowd into towns and on the public works. The negro does not like steady work. He likes odd jobs where he can get a half dollar or a dollar, and then lay off for a day or two days. That is the ideal life for him.

We must work together for a steady flow of immigration. This means that we must labor unceasingly for removal of restrictions.

As the cold weather approaches so to it that the hog quarters are well loaded. The best means for keeping hogs from piling up is to supply them with plenty of bedding. It is not enough to give them a foot or two of straw and never look near the quarters again until spring. Where one is handling a big bunch it pays, and pays well, to throw out the old straw and put in fresh every week or ten days. Where wheat straw is available it is much to be preferred to oat straw. Oat straw is too irritating on the skin of hogs and keeps them scratching most of the time they are not eating or sleeping.

ODDS AND ENDS.

When Kitchener Was Young. Lord Kitchener's father, who was rather a Spartan parent, was also a soldier, but in Ireland he turned his attention to breeding pigs as a source of income. Kitchener and his brother had to drive the pigs to market. They were sent off without breakfast and had to do without that meal on their return if their pigs remained unsold.

Cold Intellectuality. In leading young Mr. Rockefeller's Bible class last Sunday, Rev. Dr. Aked told a story apropos of the cold intellectuality of Emerson. When a narrow-minded minister said to be a more liberal minister than Emerson, "had surely gone to perdition," the latter replied: "If he has gone there you may be sure that he lowered the temperature."

Celery au Gratin. Celery cooked in this way will be found indefinitely superior to cauliflower prepared in the same manner. Cut up a large head of celery, and cook it in water until it is tender, then drain it and put it in a buttered baking dish, with white sauce, grated cheese and five breadcrumbs placed on top. Bake it until it is brown. This dish may be served—as macaroni cheese is now being served in Paris—in a hall of Stilton or other cheese from which all the inside has been taken and used.

Jews in Denmark. Figures recently obtained in Denmark as to the Jewish population of that country show that in 1883 there were about 4,000 Jews in Denmark. This number has dwindled to 2,476. "Intermarriage and absence of Jewish immigration" are given as the reason for this decrease by the London Jewish World, which says further: "In Denmark, with the exception of a very short period, the condition of the Jews has been very comfortable," but that one marriage in every four is between people who differ in religious faith.

Nature as an Artisan. As a weaver, nature produces fine work. Certain tree barks and leaves furnish excellent cloth, as, for instance, the famous tapa cloth used by the South Sea Islands. Nature is a classifier, too, according to the Indian Review. By discharging her lightning into beds of quartz sand she forms exquisite little pipes of glass. She makes valuable ropes of various kinds in the shape of tropical vines and creepers, and she is even a lace maker, as witness the lace trees of the West Indies.

About New Style Match. The new style of match with a dark colored head turned off with a thin colored cap or tip is generally supposed by the uninitiated to be simply an attempt to catch the fancy by ornamentation and to differ in no other way from the old style, one-color match. The new match was designed for a special purpose and is to a certain degree a safety match. "You can't strike it," says this authority, unless you rub the light colored cap. The dark portion is not inflammable through friction, so that if the match is lying on the floor and is trod upon the swollen head prevents the cap from being rubbed, and there is no resulting blaze of skirts or hangings or call for the fire department. At the same time you can strike the cap on any substance.

ROAD TO RICHES.

Mr. Rockefeller has been talking of money and happiness. He has all he wants and sits by and advises others not to strive for wealth, but to leave that to him.

It is true, as Rockefeller says, that we arrive too much for wealth, that we are growing a little unacquainted with the methods of getting it. Money is not all that man wants, but we work for it as if it were. We will toil for years without regard to hours, or pleasures and fall dead in search of dollars. As everybody races, all have to. There is no question but that we have carried money making beyond its legitimate limits, but how are we to stop?

Mr. Rockefeller, like most men, gives advice which does not tally with his practice, but that is human. We all do that.

Men should work hard for their money, but they should have a fixed object and wish to it. Those who do that succeed. A man who starts life with the intention of owning a farm can own the farm. A man who starts out to accumulate $10,000 can certainly get his $10,000. There is a competence within the reach of every man who is willing to pay the price to get it. Money costs about what it is worth. No waste can be made than to waste a life working for dollars and wasting them. There should be a definite aim in money making.—Exchange.

CORN IS NOT A PERFECT FOOD.

Corn is the greatest fattening food of all the cereals. This is indicated not only by chemical analysis, but by feeding the corn to farm animals. It contains one part of flesh-forming material to ten parts of fat-forming. Oats on the other hand contain one part of flesh-forming material to six of fattening material. Carrying the matter still further we find that bran contains one part protein to three and seven-tenths of fat, and oil meal is composed one part protein to one and seven-tenths of fat.

The average growing animal requires a nutritive ratio that is much narrower than is found in straight corn, and because of this it always pays to use feed to balance the corn ratio. Just where to find the cheapest material to do this is a problem that must be solved by each individual for himself.

Bran is a safe food for all growing animals also, especially for milk cows and brood sows. We have never regarded it as an extra good food for young pigs, for the reason that it is not very palatable when used as a stop for this purpose. In small quantities oil meal is excellent, especially for hogs and for cows. For hogs it hardly pays to feed more than one-tenth of the whole ration, and in the case of cows it is not economy to feed it in larger quantities than two or three pounds daily for each cow.

For hives we have found that a single handful once or twice a day is about all that the average horse will use to good advantage. The horse is about the only animal that seems to live on oil meal, so if it is fed only in small quantities it acts as an appetizer and generally shows its effect upon the coat, this being a good indication of a healthy digestive system. Even for fattening hogs and fattening cattle it will pay to use some by-product. If it can be done in no other way, it will pay to sell part of the corn and put the money into some by-product in order to balance the ration.—Farm Gazette.

Hargrove College Notes.

We enrolled sixteen new pupils since January 2nd. Thirteen of these are boarders. All the old pupils have returned except four and we are expecting these to return any day. The music department is very full. Misses Cook and Gross are very busy teachers. The expression department has re-received some accessions since the holidays.

Mrs. Boyd, the new teacher of mathematics, is doing finely. The Misses Waller, teachers of the primary and intermediate departments, are doing fine work. The little pupils seem to take hold with renewed diligence since the holidays. There is no more important work in the school than Primary and Intermediate.

Prof. Godfree has had some new accessions to his Latin classes and also to his large history class. Lazy pupils are going to have to take a back seat in this room.

Miss Hall is doing some of the best work ever done in the college in the English department. Some boys and girls are going out from this department whose parents are going to feel proud of them and justly so.

Our enrollment is 128. The boys' dormitory is running over and quite a number are rooming in private families.

We have room for two or three good girls yet in the girls' dormitory. The health of the student body is good.

Called to Gainesville. Dr. J. C. McNeese of this city received a telegram this morning from Gainesville, Okla., announcing the fact that his mother was very ill. The doctor left on the first train to reach her bedside.

The Grip. "Before we can sympathize with others, we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip, however, may be avoided by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy, not one case has ever been reported that has resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered. For sale by F. J. Ramsey, W. B. Freight Car Containing Eighteen Celestials Bound for Frisco. El Paso, Texas, Jan. 8.—An effort to ship to San Francisco in a Santa Fe freight car eighteen Chinamen, who had just smuggled across the Rio Grande from Juarez, Mex., was frustrated by the immigration authorities here tonight.

The eighteen celestials had waded across the river, and, in charge of a Mexican, were about to enter an empty box car, which was to become a part of a Santa Fe train beting ready to start for San Francisco, when an immigration inspector pronounced upon them. He only succeeded in capturing two, the other sixteen scattering in the darkness.

All Chinamen who smuggle into the United States from Mexico make an effort to get to San Francisco, for, once there, their detection as new Chinamen is almost impossible.

Police Court Dull. Not a case in the police court this morning. A good record for Ardmore or any other town the size of this one. Things have been unusually quiet in police department circles of late and many mornings Judge Galt has tapped his desk for court when there were no prisoners to try.

Reception to the Senate. Ardmoreite Special. Washington, Jan. 9.—Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks will give a reception to the members of the United States senate and their wives this evening. Many invitations have been issued and the affair will no doubt be one of the most important of the Washington social season. The handsome mansion occupied by the Fairbanks is today being beautifully decorated for the reception. This house has been the home of the vice president and his family for two years, and is owned by Representative Edward de V. Morrill of Pennsylvania. It was purchased by General Morrell shortly after his election to congress and has since been remodeled and greatly enlarged, making it one of the handsomest and largest residences in Washington. Shortly after Congressman Morrill purchased the house, his wife became an invalid, and the property was rented to Vice President Fairbanks.

Suits to Dissolve Mergers. By Associated Press. Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 9.—Suits to dissolve the alleged merger of the Wabash, Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain railway companies and Pacific express company, and to revoke the licenses and charters of the Pacific express company, the American Refrigerator Transit company, the Western Coal and Mining company, Rich Hill Coal and Mining company, and the Kansas and Missouri Elevator company, were filed in the supreme court today by Attorney General Hadley.

The petition alleges that stocks of these companies named are owned by some interests of Gould's in violation of the provisions, constitution and laws of the state of Missouri.

INTESTINAL INDIGESTION.

Its Symptoms and the Way It Should Be Treated.

It was formerly thought that the stomach was the main organ of digestion, and dyspepsia was supposed always to have its seat there. But this question has been much studied of late, with the result that the stomach has been found to be of little account comparatively in the preparation of the food for absorption. The most important part of digestion occurs in the upper part of the intestine, where the food, after leaving the stomach, is churned and mixed thoroughly with the bile and pancreatic secretion.

Since, then, the intestine takes such an important part in digestion, it is natural to suppose that a failure to perform this function properly would give rise to serious disturbances of health, and such, in fact, is the case.

Intestinal indigestion is a not uncommon affection of all periods of life and is especially prevalent in children. The chief symptoms are flatulence, or wind, more or less colic, diarrhoea, or more often constipation, or an alternation of the two and practical starvation, as shown in weakness and emaciation.

The treatment is mainly through diet, but this will vary, of course, according to age. In an infant the problem is a difficult one. If the child is fed artificially all prepared foods containing starch should be taken away, and cows' milk, modified as to the amount of fat, sugar or casein it contains, according to the physician's directions, should be substituted.

If the infant is nursing the life of the mother should be studied, for the state of her health may affect the milk injuriously.

In older children and adults the amount of fats and of starchy foods must be carefully regulated. Cereals, pastry, rice, potatoes and bread must be cut out of the dietary for a time or taken in very small quantity. When eaten at all they should be most thoroughly, even excessively, chewed, for in this way they may be in great measure digested by the saliva before reaching the intestine.

The diet should consist mainly of milk, white of eggs and the most digestible meats and fish. The diarrhoea or constipation should be regulated, and sometimes the administration of intestinal antiseptics is beneficial. Regular exercise in the open air is of great value in the treatment. The cold bath or shower bath is often of service when it is followed by a healthy reaction.—Youth's Companion.

A Picture in Wood.

There are various glimpses of Whistler in the reminiscences of the late Sir Wyke Baylis, whilom president of the Society of British Artists. Here is an incident of "hanging day" while Whistler occupied the presidency:

A carpenter held in his hand a piece of wood, with which he was about to steady a heavy frame. It was a battens of yellow deal, with a large knot of lovely color, pitch brown and gold, running the whole length of the board. Seizing the board, I made the carpenter saw out of it a fragment to fit a frame which stood on the mantelpiece. At a little distance the thing assumed the appearance of a golden sunset seen across an open country, with a little hill or clump of trees against the luminous sky. The gradation of color was beautiful beyond description. At that moment the president entered. We pointed across the gallery to the new "harmony in gold and brown" and congratulated him on its loveliness. Mr. Whistler, hastily putting his eyeglasses to his eye, exclaimed: "Eh, eh! What's that? Who lent that?" He was as much delighted as we were.

Premature Burial.

Statistics have been prepared to show that in Europe out of every 100 supposed deaths one person is resuscitated. Although members of the medical profession refuse to take any interest in the matter, it is probably true, says Suggestion, that many persons are buried while in a state of suspended animation. It is stated that in the cemetery just outside the town of Welmar there is special provision made against the danger of premature burial from suspended animation. No bodies are placed in the ground until they have spent a considerable time in a receiving vault. In the fingers of the corpse are placed strings which communicate with an alarm. The least movement will ring a bell in an adjoining chamber, where a guardian is always on the watch. In several instances by this timely alarm persons prematurely buried have been rescued. It is said that the provision arose from the tradition that one of the princes of Saxo-Weimar, this being their family burial place, was buried alive.
