STAR DRUG STORE

"The Store that Saves You Money"

Good Money in One Picture

The plate of the "lucking bronco" picture, which attracted so much attention, has been sold to a St. Louis Calendar House, and when the present small supply of pictures are sold, this photo will be off the market. Mr. Heitkemper, who secured the photo during the fair last fall, says he has sold over two hundred of these pictures and received orders for them from all parts of the United States. He says that he made enough on this one picture to reimburse him for all his expenses in amateur photography the past two years.

Unimportant.

"But," demanded the first professor of theology, "how can you call his thesis excellent if, as you say, some of his arguments are extremely irrelevant?"

"You didn't catch my remark correctly," replied the other. "I said 'irrelevant.'"

"Oh, that's a different thing!"—Philadelphia Press.

Reversing the Rule.

"I suppose Jones' baby is as remarkable as the average infant."

"Really, now, it is a remarkable child."

"Is it indeed?"

"Yes; it has never said a thing since it could talk which was worth repeating."—Baltimore American.

Consolation.

"Steward, how long will it be before we get into the harbor?"

"About an hour and a half, ma'am."

"Oh, dear, I shall die before then!"

"Very likely, ma'am, but you'll be all right again when you've been on shore ten minutes."—Marine Journal.

The Final Test.

Grayce—it doesn't make any difference what Mr. Stell wears, he always looks well groomed and gentlemanly, doesn't he?

Maye—Isn't it so? Why, that man would look swell in ear muffs!—Cleveland Leader.

Seemed Longer.

Mr. Gotham—How long have you lived out there in the suburbs?

Mr. Flatbush—Oh, about six years.

Mrs. Flatbush—What are you talking about, dear? We've only lived out there six months!—Yonkers Statesman.

THE GREAT CITY.

A well known clergyman of Boston was once talking to some friends with reference to the desirability of chronological coherence in ideas in the form of written statements, when he observed that there are times when this method becomes a trifle too suggestive.

"For instance," said the speaker, "I once heard a minister in New Hampshire make his usual Sunday morning announcements as follows:

"The funeral of the late and much lamented sexton takes place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock."

"Thanksgiving services will be held in this chapel on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock."—Lippincott's.

TAILLESS CATS.

Considerable Doubt Still Exists as to Their Origin.

M. Gustave Lohel, a naturalist charged with a mission to the Isle of Man, has just published a long report of a visit to that island, where he was able to observe the existence of tailless cats, about which there is a lack of precise data and which Darwin studied for some time.

It is rather surprising that there is a divergence of views on the characteristics of the animal at present. It is nevertheless recognized that it is rare. M. Gustave Lohel had difficulty in procuring a Manx cat, the seller asking from 375 to 625 francs each.

There is much discussion about the coats of these cats. Some people say they are black, others sandy, others again variegated. As for the tail, some say they have tails without having them; others say that, though there is no tail, yet there is some. M. Lohel says the tail is lacking, is reduced to a sinewy, knotted, twisted fillet under the skin. The posterior part of the animal is well developed, as if that part had been nourished by the tail and had absorbed it. This gives the animal a distinctive form.

Did the species originate locally? This is possible. On the other hand in a Dorsetshire village there is a number of tailless cats, progeny of a female cat which lost her tail through accident.

Did the species come from a distant quarter? This again is possible. The common cat is mentioned in a text dating from the ninth century ("Laws of the Welsh Prince Hoelida") as a rare animal of recent date. The tailless cat is only mentioned at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Or did this species come from a wrecked vessel coming from Prussia, where cats of this kind do not seem to have been abundant, or Japan, Malaysia or the Crimea, where the existence of cats without tails is on record?

As a matter of fact, nothing is known for certain. M. G. Lohel records that cats without tails have a profound antipathy toward the ordinary cat. He has, moreover, come across another interesting variety in the Isle of Man, a species of chickens without rumps. Possibly the climate is unfavorable for the development of posterior appendages.—From L'Etouard Egyptian.

An Elective Monarch.

A million of men have died to preserve the constitution as it is, but Providence has passed no law exempting Americans from the pressure of events or the operation of necessities. They will have to accept them, willingly or unwillingly, and will gradually find that the only effect of the changes is to make their choice of a president, and therefore of his cabinet, for cabinet ministers in America are legally only clerks—more and more a matter of vital importance. The president of the United States will in no long period of time be the greatest elective monarch history has ever known.—London Spectator.

Time to Protect Oysters.

One of the greatest foes to the oyster industry is the starfish, which frequently covers large areas of the sea bottom to a depth of eighteen to twenty inches, sometimes blanketing entire beds of oysters. The stars are very hard to destroy, says Popular Mechanics, but it has been discovered that their steady advance can be checked with lime. The lime is placed in paper bags and dropped along the boundary of the oyster bed. A paper bag causes it to descend through the water, and beyond the lime barrier thus formed not a starfish will pass. A better means for getting the lime to the bottom is being devised.

Life Saving Clothes.

A Norwegian inventor has patented a suit of clothes which will protect its wearer against drowning. The clothes are lined with a nonabsorbent material made of specially prepared vegetable fiber which without being too heavy will effectually hold up the weight of a man in the water. Twelve ounces of the new material will, it is claimed, save a person from sinking. The invention has been tested with favorable results at Christiania. Successful trials were also made with rugs made of the same material capable of supporting two persons in the water.

Three Kaisers.

It may be interesting to recall the names given in Germany to the present kaiser and his two predecessors. The first was "der grosse kaiser," the second "der weise kaiser" and the present "der reise kaiser." It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that this means "the gray emperor, the wise emperor and the traveling emperor," but, at any rate, the names are a happy inspiration.—London Globe.

Having Fun With Eagle.

All kinds of fun is being poked at the eagle on the new ten dollar gold pieces. It is declared that the bird wears pajamas. Some people call them pantslets. Ornithologically speaking, the abused bird, however, is pretty nearly perfect. The adult eagle in life has the pantsletted appearance. The bird can't help it, and why should the artist turn nature (air?)—Chicago Post.
