

Get the Essence of Satisfaction

By Dealing with a Strictly Reliable House

When it's Jewelry, Watch Repairing, Optical Work or kindred lines you want, come to the Leading Establishment in those particular lines, where you get your money back if you are not satisfied. Our reputation is pretty good, too, as the old saying serves as proof, "Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery," so it don't make me mad to have others copy the simple and upright business methods I am using.

PERT PAGRAPHES.

Really nobody seems to know much about how to run a country, but there are plenty who are dead willing to learn.

Truly we ought to profit by our misfortunes, but if we were to do so would they then be misfortunes?

A tactful person is one who impressively leaves the impression that he is greatly impressed.

The curious thing about it is that the more a man is compelled to borrow the less he is able to.

It certainly is expensating to laboriously put by something for a rainy day and then when you go to get it to find it has been soaked.

The reason that a sucker bites is because that is what he is on earth for.

A rolling stone is a smooth proposition.

If a girl is in love with a poor man she is apt to think riches are sinful things.

Perhaps we have reason to be thankful that most men do not do half as much as they might if they energized up to their capacity.

Probably the man who has no religion in his business has no business with religion.

"The Store that Saves You Money"

A Noisy Operation.

A noted English suffragist was describing at a dinner a very disorderly suffragette meeting. "The noise," she said, "can only be likened to the hubbub that I once heard coming from the nursery of a friend with whom I was taking tea. Terrified by this infernal turmoil, my friend and I burst into the nursery breathless. The children, in a close group by the window, the baby in the middle, looked up calmly.

"What on earth are you doing?" the mother demanded.

"We've found," said the oldest boy, "poor grandma's teeth, and we're fling them down and fling them on the baby."

Snakes in the South Sea Islands.

In many of the south sea islands the snake is often held to be sacred, as it is thought to be connected with a spirit. At Vauva there are snakes which strangers are not allowed to see lest some misfortune should follow. Those that are held are not fed or worshipped, but such as are the familiars of individuals who know them receive sacrifices. In the New Hebrides snakes are highly regarded. A native of Pentecost island if he sees one in a sacred place or in a house will think that there is some reason for its appearing to him. He will pour over himself the juice of a young coconut and ever afterward expect to find the world go well with him through the influence of the spirit.

A Feast of the Pharaohs.

Just in proportion as the Roman laurels surpassed in extravagance modern affairs of the kind, so may the Roman functions be classed as imitations of those of the potentates of the east. We are told that during the reign of the pharaohs the guests would arrive at midday. A slave stationed behind each guest was ready to obey the least command, and time passed quickly in feasting and merrymaking. And when the guests seemed almost satisfied a slave appeared bearing a small figure of a mummy, which he exhibited portentously to the revelers, saying: "Gaze here! Drink and be merry, for when you die such will you be?" One writer says that the proof still exists pictorially that the fair sex of that time and country drank more than was good for them, due to this gruesome stimulation probably, while their lords and masters had frequently to be carried home from a festive gathering limp as the faded lotus blossoms on their furrowed brows.—New York Tribune.

Wasted Effort.

"I hear, Miss Pink, that you were almost drowned last summer?"
"Yes, I had a narrow escape."
"Somebody rescue you?"
"No. It was the most provoking thing you ever heard of. There wasn't a man in sight, and I had to swim ashore unaided."

Selfish.

"Why, I wouldn't give that to a dog."
"Ah, I see; keep it yourself."

Quite Plain.
"They tell me he is brighter than he looks."
"He looks as though he might be."
