AUTOMOBILIST GETS DAMAGES FROM FARMER.

BALEM, Ore., October 26. A verdict for damages that upsets all the traditional experiences of the automobilist in the rural districts, has been decided in the courts of this county.

In this instance it was the motor enthusiast who was damaged and the farmer who was molested, the case, it is said, establishing a precedent.

Last summer Benjamin was driving his automobile near Gervais. His headlights were lighted as a warning to drivers and pedestrians. C. W. Cutsford, a farmer, was driving along the road when Benjamin saw him and pulled his automobile to one side of the road to let the farmer and his splitted horses pass. Cutsford became confused and turned his horses into the machine with disastrous results to the automobile. Benjamin sued for $400 and was awarded $100 damages.

District Attorney Jerome has announced that grand jury investigations show New York gambling houses are paying $50 a month for police protection. This will not be elaborated on in any of the campaign fund expense accounts that either party will publish in New York, but it will enter much more materially into the coming election than any of the contributions that will receive publicity. It is naturally to the interest of both gamblers and policemen to continue present police officials in office. In such emergencies as this the country has need of independent voters, voters who will go on record, not against a particular party, but against corruption, regardless of whether that corruption be of Democratic or Republican origin.

The Reck in St. Petersburg makes public the official statistics of the official executions in Russia during the year 1908 on sentences imposed by the military courts. The total is 627 of which 84 were soldiers and 543 civilians. The figures are considerably below the earlier unofficial estimates which were based on the condemnations reported in press dispatches. According to the official figures 543 persons were either shot or hung for murder or arson accompanied by violence, 62 for mutiny, 18 for crimes against the state and four for desertion. The Baltic provinces took the lead in the number of executions with 134. This was due to the final stamping out of the insurrection.

Woman suffrage was dealt a blow in New York state this week when Justice Truax in the supreme court denied the application of Dr. Julia Setonsars, a suffragite, for a writ of mandamus to compel the board of election inspectors to recognize and register her as a voter. The corporation counsel who appeared for the election inspectors declared that a female under the laws of New York state is not entitled to vote, and the court took the same view.

A Missouri physician has declared that dairymen who skim their milk and sell it as the pure product ought to be hanged. This is all very well as far as it goes, but how about the rascals that skim the chalk off the water and sell it for cream?

This little story is from real life. It shows how a man may prosper and through failure to control himself may yet make a miserable failure. One day in 1906 a man who gave his name as G. Irving La Mont arrived in Los Angeles, Cal. He said he came from Cranford, N.Y., where his mother lived, and that he had a brother, H. Murray La Mont, who was a wealthy New York banker. The new-comer dressed in the height of style and gave every evidence of being prosperous. He opened two real estate offices. Success seemed to attend him on every hand. His business prospered and he was received in the most exclusive social circles. After he had been in Los Angeles about one year his friends began to comment on his use of introductions. He was frequently away from his office for long periods. He grew careless about his business and social engagements. Conditions went from bad to worse; and then to worst. Finally there were rumors that the young man was financially involved. One day Robert Barry, a real estate broker, called at La Mont's office to inquire about an investment of $100 that La Mont had made for him. La Mont was not in his office. Barry called several times, each time being informed that the broker had not returned. Barry eventually went to the police with his story. He said he believed that La Mont had fled. A few days ago in San Diego a possibly blind beggar approached a detective on the street and asked for alms. The detective arrested the man. At the police station he was recognized as La Mont. Word was sent to Los Angeles and a policeman from that city went to San Diego to take the prisoner back home to face charges of embezzling. He is said to have taken not only the $100 from Barry, but other trust funds as well. On his return to Los Angeles, La Mont admitted his identity. He said he had fled to Mexico. There he had squandered the money and soon found himself penniless. He permitted his beard to grow and sought work. Unable to obtain it, this once wealthy man joined a party of tramps and rode with them on brakebeams to San Diego. He roamed the streets for three days in search of work, but with no encouragement and, finally, in order to sustain life, began to beg. The first man he accosted refused to aid him; the second was the detective who placed him under arrest.

The Second Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg wants a pastor. In order to obtain the services of a competent man, the congregation has decided to raise the salary from $7000 to $10,000 and to invite the most famous Presbyterian preachers of this country and Canada to enter into competition for the pulpit. Pittsburgers will soon be trying to take their money to the next world.

Campaign buttons, once so popular, are a drug on the market. Manufacturers are greatly overstocked and are disposing of them at reduced rates to news and candy stands who distribute them to the small boys.

Civilization goes marching on. A mob of Kurds recently raided a Constantinople police station and lynched a Greek prisoner who was accused of acting improperly toward a Mohammedan woman.
