CONGRESS TO REDUCE TAXES ON LUXURIES

Republicans to Prevent Necessities of Life Being Classified as Otherwise
 Washington—One of the first measures of revenue reform to be put forward by the Republican Congress is a reduction of the luxury tax provisions of the revenue law enacted at the last session of the Democratic Congress.
 It is contended by legislators that any of these provisions impose an unnecessary burden upon the purchaser of the ordinary necessities of life and unduly add to the cost of living. For instance, it is pointed out that it is now difficult to buy a good and substantial pair of shoes, either for men or women, for less than $10. Yet the law declares that a pair of shoes which costs more than that is a luxury and is so taxed. A derby hat of good quality of the average man, which formerly cost $3, now costs $8. But the revenue law defines it a luxury if more than $5 is paid. The same is true on all items costing more than $3. One of the most popular makes of shirts in the country today could be purchased before the war for $1.50, but now costs $3. Ordinary shirts have therefore under the Kitchen-Simmons law become a luxury, for which the purchaser must pay an additional tax. Not many women would consider a hat costing $15 a luxury, especially in these days of high prices, but the law declares that any hat of this sort which costs more than that sum is a luxury and must be taxed. Hence the object of the Republicans who are to take control of the Ways and Means Committee in the House and the Finance Committee in the Senate to remove what they term these absurdities of the law.

 Representative Bascom Sloop of Virginia, a member of the Appropriations Committee, and himself a business man, has proposed this financial plan: "Reduction of taxes, I should say, from 25 to 33 per cent. I should separate the abnormal from the normal expenses so far as can be; that is, I should consider the necessary running of the government in a way similar to what it was before the war, the interest on the public debt and a sinking fund therefor as normal expenses of the government. These should be met by taxation. Railroad, telegraph and telephone losses, public highways, the large army necessary for the emergency and similar expenses I should regard as abnormal and to be borne by bond issues. I will assume the normal expenses of running the government similar to before the war to be between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, interest on the public debt to be $800,000, and the sinking fund $500,000. This would bring the total to be derived from taxation to below $3,000,000,000 annually."
