GERMAN MARINES WHO ARE CO-OPERATING WITH THE LAND FORCES IN BELGIUM

Admiral von Schroeden (with sword) is shown here with his staff of officers, who left their ships and came overland to direct the fire of big naval guns which had been dismounted, shipped by train and then remounted on concrete bases. These are some of the men who bombarded Antwerp and have since spent much time building lines of trenches from Bruges to Ghent.

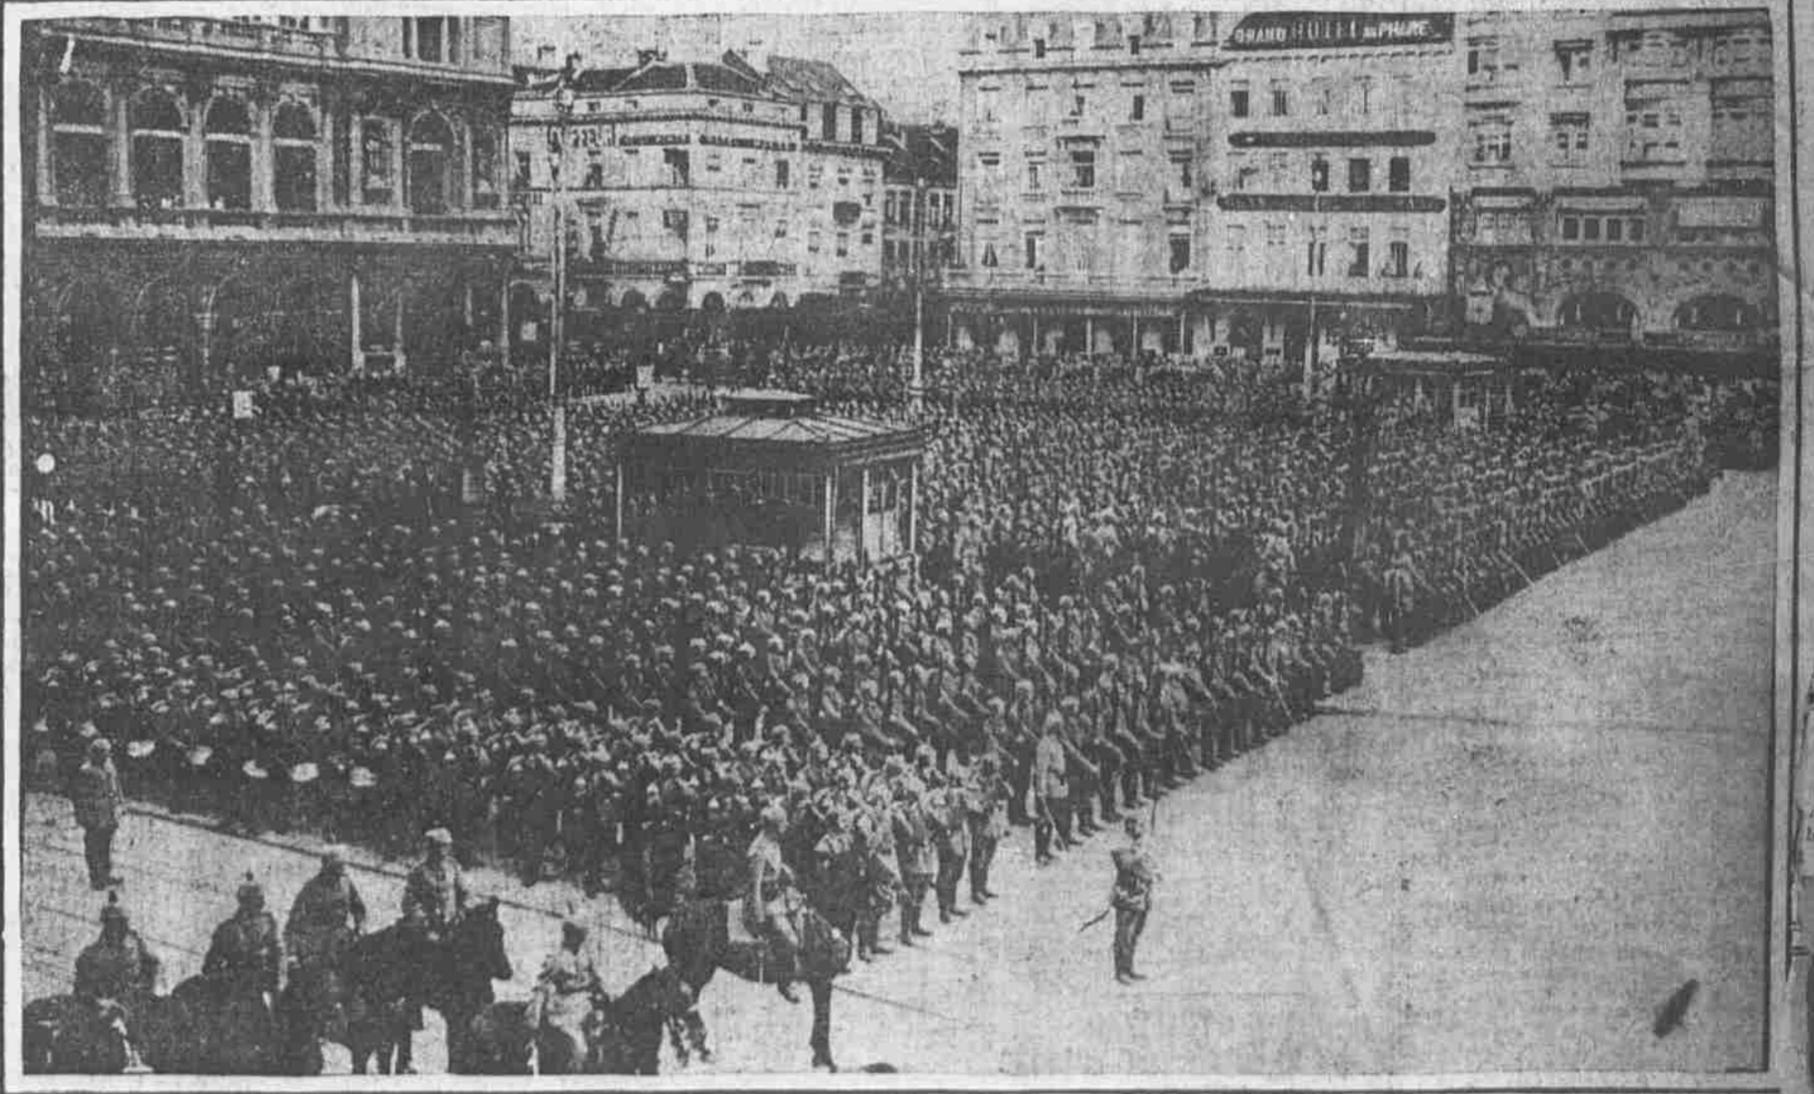

AMERICAN HORSES FOR THE WAR ZONE

Some of the 1500 horses at the Jersey City stock yard ready to be shipped to Europe. Early in the war the United States was combed by hundreds of agents of the Allies in their search for suitable mounts.

A COSSACK LOCHINVAR AND BRIDE

This Cossack, with a Circassian beauty perched on his saddle, was no doubt a suitor for the hand of the young lady who was looked upon with disfavor by the girl's parents. So she consented to the elopement. She is dressed in all her finery.

A REVIEW OF GERMAN TROOPS IN A PUBLIC SQUARE IN BRUSSELS

The Belgian capital has become a big German military post and reviews, inspections and parades are held there as fast as new regiments of troops arrive. The maneuvers are the same as those of dress parade, though the men are in full field uniform. It is to be noticed that the bandsmen all wear the traditional helmet just as the fighting men do.

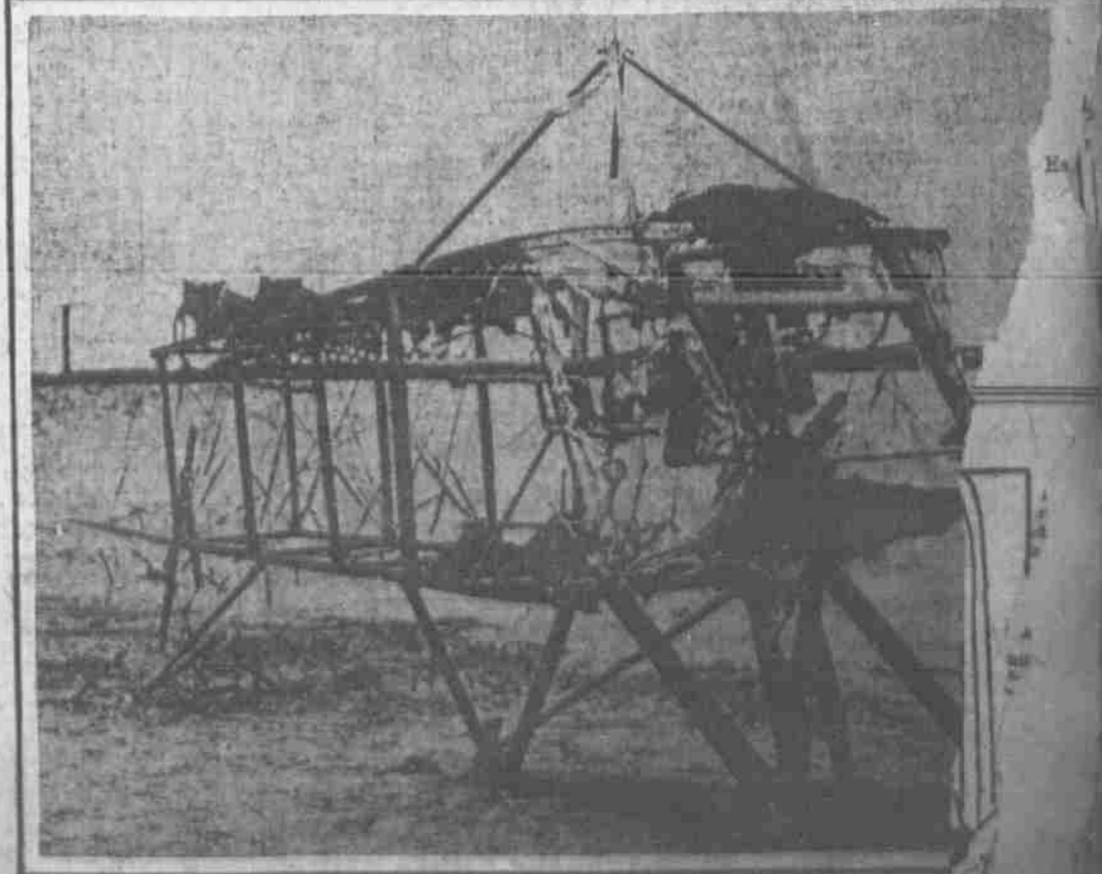

ALGERIAN TROOPS CAPTURED BY THE ENEMY

French officers are fond of using the Turks for reconnoitering purposes and, as a result, many of them have at times been trapped and surrounded. Varying types of features can be noticed among these troops.

SIR HENRY HOWARD, BRITISH ENVOY TO THE VATICAN

For the first time in history the British Government has sent a permanent envoy to the Vatican.

GERMAN AEROPLANE BROUGHT DOWN AND BURNED

This shows all that was left of a military biplane after it had caught fire by iron shells fired by French batteries. Its two passengers were seen killed straight was virtually a charred skeleton by the time it reached the ground.
