...—P. P. Claxton, ...ner of education ...sup...sion of laws or ...bidding married women ...DAL ...school as the best means of replacing the large number of teachers who have quit to enter war work.

In a letter to city, county and State school authorities Doctor Claxton points out that many sections are facing a shortage of teachers because higher wages paid in commercial and industrial occupations are attracting many young women from the schools. He says:

"Unless something can be done to relieve the situation the places of many trained and experienced teachers will be taken by young teachers without experience or professional preparation. There are, however, in the country scores of thousands of persons, mostly women, of good scholarship and professional training, who have had successful experience as teachers, but who have retired from active service. Many of these might render valuable service again in the school. As a means of relief in the present crisis, I recommend that they be called again into active service, and that laws, ordinances and regulations of school boards prohibiting married women from teaching in the public schools be suspended or repealed."
