Pet. Centre, Tuesday, Jan. 5.

AN INQUISTIVE DOWN EASTER.

A gentleman, riding in an Eastern railway car, which was rather scantily supplied with passengers, observed in a seat before him a lean, slab-sided Yankee, every feature of whose face seemed to ask a question, and a little circumstance soon proved that he possessed a more "inquisitive mind." Before him, occupying the entire seat, sat a lady dressed in deep mourning, and after shifting his position several times, and maneuvering to get an opportunity to look into her face, he at length caught her eye and commenced:

"In affliction?"
"Yes, sir," responded the lady.
"Parent—father or mother?"
"No, sir."
"Child, perhaps—boy or girl?"
"No, sir, not a child; I have no children."

"Husband, then, I expect?"
"Yes," was the curt answer.
"Hum—oholera!—a tradin' man, may be?"

"My husband was a seafaring man—captain of a vessel! He did not die of cholera! he was drowned!"
"Oh, drowned, eh!" pursued the inquisitor, hesitating for a brief instant.
"Save his chest?"
"Yes, the vessel was saved, and my husband's effects," said the widow.

"Was they?" asked the Down Easter, his eyes brightening up.
"Pious man?"
"He was a member of the Methodist church."

"The question was delayed, but it came.
"Don't you think you have great cause to be thankful that he was a pious man and saved his chest?"
"I do," said the widow abruptly, and turning her head to look out the window. The inquisitive "pump" changed his position, held the widow by his glittering eye once more, and pronounced one more query in a little lower tone, with his head slightly inclined forward over the back of the seat, then the delicate question came out.

"Was you calculatin' to get married agin?"
"Sir," said the widow, indignantly, "you are impertinent."
And she left her seat, and took another on the other side of the car.

"Pears to be a little huffy," said the inquisitive here, turning to our narrator behind him; she needn't be mad. I don't want to hurt her feelings. What did they make you pay for that umbrella you've got in your hand? It's a real poopy one."

Receiving no answer to his last remark, he was left to his own meditations.
