

"GREATEST ON EARTH."

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

Mr. R. T. Caldwell, is book-keeper in the First National Bank of Fulton, Ky. I was completely run down. My nerves became so unstrung through loss of sleep and worry that I felt sure I would be compelled to give up my position. I would be awake all night long, and it took but little to shake me up so that I could not possibly attend to my business as I should. In connection with this I had liver trouble, heaviness about the stomach, and pains in different parts of my body. I was also much reduced in flesh. I was persuaded to try

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

I first procured a trial bottle from a local druggist and good results quickly followed. I then procured a dollar bottle, and by the time I had used this up I was a different man. I am now on my third bottle and am able to sleep soundly and eat regularly, something I could not possibly do before taking your Nervine. I am now fully recovered, and do not hesitate to pronounce Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the greatest medicine on earth."

HORSE RATIONS.

Properly Balanced Meals For Animals That Must Stand Hard Work.

A subscriber writes: I have two horses that will weigh about 1,100 pounds each. What will be a good ration to feed them so they will stand hard work? I have plenty of oats, corn and hay. The hay is mixed, part timothy, blue grass and sometimes a little orchard grass and clover through it. It was what I call good fine hay. Some has a little dust in it, but I am dampening it with water, always keeping some wet ahead so it can get well dampened all through. Can corn and oats be mixed to make a good grain ration or will bran and oats or bran and corn or all together make a better ration? Will it be advisable to grind the grain (I have a grinder)? Will it be best to feed the grain wet or dry?

These horses are sleek and fat, but neither has extra wind. Would fodder be better than the hay? Where can a feeding chart be obtained?

Answer: If it were not for its being a little dusty your hay would be the ideal hay for the horses, and as you wet it you obviate the trouble in a measure. By far too many farmers feed too much hay to their horses. What hay a horse will eat in an hour is enough for a well grain fed horse. As there is such a difference in the individuality of horses it is not possible for any one to say just how much grain should be fed to horses of the same weight, as some require more than others. Again the class of work, whether slow or fast, farm work or road work, makes a difference. And still again some horses cannot digest corn, or cornmeal, while others will eat it with a relish and their stomachs will well digest it. But as a rule all horses like oats, and oats furnish more nerve and muscle than any other grain food of the same weight and consequently are the best of all the grain foods as a basis for horse feeding.

I would therefore say, if these 1,100 pound horses are to be used every day at moderate work on the farm or road, a feed morning and night of what hay they will eat in an hour and four quarts of good sound oats will furnish as good a ration as any that can be compounded. At noon make the oats five quarts, and when Sunday comes, or an idle day or days, feed but three quarts of the oats morning and night. A horse with good teeth can do all the grinding of oats that is necessary to make them enter the stomach in proper shape for digesting. But as some horses "hog" them down without proper chewing, it may be advisable to grind them or to make a large flat bottom feed box, so they will be compelled to eat them more slowly, or several round stones can be put in the feed box, thus compelling them to pick up the oats in small mouthfuls. Some farmers feed largely of cornmeal or corn to their horses and they get fat upon it. But while corn makes them fat, it does not make muscle, nerve and strength like oats, and the corn fed horse, even if it agrees with him, cannot work or drive with the oat fed one. That is principally the reason why the western horse that has been corn fed does not command the price of those that have been fed oats and wheat bran.—National Stockman.

REPRESENTATIVE WALKER PLANS.

He Wants Bonds to the Amount of $750,000,000 Issued.

Representative Walker, of Massachusetts, in the interest of the great banking trust introduced two bills Saturday relating to banking and currency, entitled respectively, "To modify the national banking laws so as to provide the people with a safe, ample, elastic, and cheap currency," and "To call in and cancel the paper money now injuring the prosperity of the country." The first bill provides that hereafter no national bank shall be required to deposit bonds to secure circulation, and circulating notes are to be issued up to the unimpaired capital of a bank. The same reserve is required for the circulating notes as for individual deposits. The cash reserve shall be in specie, and at least one-half of it in gold. Specie shall be paid on demand, under penalty of 24 per cent. interest as damages during the time of refusal so to pay.

The other bill provides for the issue of $750,000,000 of bonds under the act of January 19, 1895, running from two to ten years and drawing 2 1/2 per cent. interest. The proceeds are to be used in redeeming and cancelling outstanding United States legal tender notes, treasury notes, and silver certificates. The bill further authorizes the sale of silver bullion and silver dollars in the treasury at the market value whenever such silver dollars cannot be kept in circulation as money. The proceeds of the sale of silver shall reduce the issue of bonds to that extent.—S. K. W.
