The President's Message.

The Western Union Telegraph operators under A. H. Stewart, day chief, and J. U. Rust, night chief, who received the President's Message yesterday over four wires, did their work exceedingly well. The Banner force is a unit in saying that it was decidedly the best telegraphic "copy" ever received in this city, the punctuations even being observed with strict care.—[Nashville Banner, 5.

This is no doubt a well deserved compliment. As the message, which was all received before eleven o'clock here, was, for some mysterious reason, withheld from the LEDGER by the managers of the Western Union Telegraph Company, we can not speak from the card as to its clearness. The Memphis operators, however, generally furnish excellent copy, almost plain as print.

THE Little Rock Democrat announces that General Grandison D. Royston, of Hempstead county, Ark., but a native of Tennessee, is a candidate for United States Senator and mentions some interesting facts in his life. General Royston was born at Jonesboro, in East Tennessee, in 1810. In March, 1832, he moved to Fayetteville, being then twenty-two years of age, and in December of the same year to Washington, Arkansaw, where he has been engaged in the practice of the law. He has been in public life at intervals since 1833 as Prosecuting Attorney, member of the State House of Representatives, of which he was Speaker, member of the Confederate Congress and of both the first and last Constitutional Conventions of this State. He was President of the Constitutional Convention of 1874. The General is the father of two sons and a daughter; all living. Now in his 73d year, he is hale and hearty, as full of animation and vigor as a youth of 20. And though so often in public service, he stands to-day without reproach against either his public or private character, and it is safe to say that he will prove quite a formidable contestant for the exalted position which he seeks.

THERE is one thing in the President's message to be approved, and that is his reference to Mormonism. The Republican party, in full power for over twenty years, has permitted this denomination to grow strong and defiant and has never made a vigorous effort to break it up. So strong has it grown that nothing less than the military force will crush the institution. It is the disgrace and burning shame of the age. The President recommends vigorous measures, which, it is to be hoped, will be rigidly enforced.

A RESOLUTION was introduced in the Virginia Legislature yesterday arraigning Mahone for his conduct and requesting him to resign as United States Senator. Little Mahone will smile a big smile all around under his whiskers.

AN Arkansaw jury in Polk county has found a verdict in the case of a man who died of intemperance that is unique to say the least: "The deceased came to his death by drinking between drinks."

THE Commercial Gazette has made the discovery that Carlisle made a secession speech eleven years after the war. Wonder if he wasn't in charge of Andersonville prison also.

THE WORLD'S COTTON EXPOSITION.

Plans for Buildings by a Mississippi Architect Accepted.

NEW ORLEANS, December 6.—The Board of Managers of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition have adopted a design prepared by G. M. Jargenian, an architect of Meridian Mississippi, for the main building, which will be 1500 feet long and 900 wide, with 1,000,836 square feet of floor space, including a music hall in the center with a seating capacity of 12,000 persons. The design also provides for main offices, telegraph office, newspaper department, fire department, police, hospital, waiting rooms, and life saving apparatus. Ten plans were offered and three premiums awarded. The building will be the largest exposition building ever erected except the one which was built in London in 1862.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

LONDON, December 6—Bullion in the Bank of England has decreased 162,000 pounds during the past week. The proportion of reserve liabilities being forty-two and a quarter per cent.

HONG KONG, December 6—The government refuses to withdraw or modify its claim regarding the Tonquin troubles, and prefers war to the surrender of the province to France. Large bodies of troops are continually passing Hong Kong for the Tonquin border.

CAIRO, December 6—The great panic at Khartaum is subsiding. It is not now believed that Mahdi contemplates an early advance from El O'Brid.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 6.—The fire in the Haskini quarters has been subdued after raging for eighteen hours. The government is relieving the many sufferers.

LONDON, December 6—Frederick Clay, he eminent composer, is suffering from paralysis.

Moody and Sankey have opened at Stepney to-day in the Iron Building, in which the services will be conducted. At Istinglon Mission and at Wandsworth they were highly successful.

Failure of a Shoe House—Big Insolvency of Another Firm.

BOSTON, December 6.—Arrington Bros. boot and shoe dealers, have failed. Their liabilities are about $27,000, and their nominal assets $18,000.

In the insolvency case of William Plaisted & Son, formerly in the tanning business at Lincoln, Maine, a final dividend of 15 per cent is declared. A dividend of 25 per cent, previously declared. The total amount of the indebtedness of the firm is about $125,000.

The Dog Match.

GRAND JUNCTION, December 5.—For the all ages stake, partly run yesterday, and completed this morning, H. and D. Bryson's Sue, beat W. I. Crawford's Gath, and won first prize of $250; Gath taking second prize of $150. Third prize, of $100, was divided between Dan and Foreman. The Derby Stakes, for young pointers, began to-day, and will doubtless occupy until to-morrow and perhaps Saturday.

Supers Arrested for Theft.

CHICAGO, December 6.—The supers employed at the Grand Opershouse have been arrested, suspected of various thefts reported by the members of the theatrical and opera companies. Some jewelry was found in their possession which has since been identified. In the room of one of the supers arrested the police found fifteen watches and other property of a like nature.

Fires.

SALEM, IND., December 6—The Salem Woolen Mills, which has been idle two months, burned last night. Loss, $75,000. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

MONTREAL, December 6—Whellas' drug store and Haswell & Co. burned last night. Loss, $60,000; insured.

THE SOMERVILLE FIRE.

A Row of Buildings Burned—Loss, $8000; Insurance, $5000.

Brief mention has been made of the destructive fire which occurred at Somerville last Friday night. The Reporter and Falcon of this week contains full particulars, and the following is from its report:

It was about half past four o'clock, just before the train moved out of the depot. When the cry was raised the whole roof of W. T. Hamblett's saloon, on the southwest corner of the square, was in flames. It probably originated in the kitchen of Hambblett's restaurant.

The fire must have been smouldering for hours, for from the time it was first seen issuing from the roof scarcely a moment elapsed before the whole structure was in flames. The store occupied by Mr. Hambblett is the property of Mrs. Amelia Riddick, and was a large two story brick building, but very old. In one of the upper rooms Colonel Joseph A. Hill, the manager of the restaurant, with Mr. John Crawford and Mat Watkins were sleeping. Mr. Watkins says that some time about half-past four o'clock he was awakened by the barking of Hambblett's little dog, and hearing something fall. The other gentlemen becoming aroused, proceeded to investigate and determine cause of the tumult. Upon pushing open the door leading into the passage separating the eating rooms from the cooking department, a dense and suffocating volume of smoke rolled irresistably into the room, extinguishing the lights and almost smothering the occupants. Colonel Hill, by groping about in the smoke and darkness, managed to come down by the front entrance into the saloon. There finding that outside parties had discovered the fire and were rushing to the rescue he made his way back to the room. The fire had then made such headway it was impossible to return and he was let down from the front veranda by means of a ladder. Messrs Crawford and Watkins leaped into a tree standing in front and thus escaped. So short a time intervened between the discovery of the fire and the falling in of the roof that scarcely any of Hambblett's effects were saved. He managed to unlock his safe and secure the change he had in it. Upon the west side of the Hambblett building was situated Williams & Hirsch's livery stable. On the opposite side is the tailor shop and confectionery of J. B. Heinrich. These buildings caught about the time the roof of the saloon fell in. Heinrich saved nearly all his goods, and in the stable all the horses and vehicles were rapidly gotten out of danger. The flames could not spread eastward on account of the high parapet walls of Hirsch's store, but they swept to the west, lapping with greedy eagerness a row of small one story buildings occupied by negroes.

The flames having spent their force began to die down about 6 o'clock. From Hirsh's building on the east to the last house on the street was a smoking ruin.

The losses are estimated about as follows: Dr. J. S. Washington, livery stable and frame office adjoining, $1800; insurance $800 in the Householder's Mutual Benefit Association, of Nashville. Hirsh Bros. & Williams, loss on corn, fodder, etc., $150. J. B. Heinrich, confectionery and tailor shop; loss on house $500, on stock, furniture, etc., $400. T. K. Riddick, on saloon building, $1500. W. T. Hambleti, the occupant of the building, loss on bar fixtures, stock, confectionery, restaurant, etc., $2500. Frank Trimble, two brick offices, about $750. The only insurance carried was $800 by Dr. Washington.

Messrs. Hamblett and Heinrich have begun anew. The former now has his stock in the storehouse of Frank Trimble on the north side of the square; the latter occupies the old Bernaschina stand.

THE SENATE EMPLOYES.

Two Stories About the Proceedings of a Republican Caucus.

Special to the Courier-Journal.

WASHINGTON, December 4—If reports are true, Mahone and Riddleberger are hopping mad to-night. It is said there was a caucus of Republican Senators after the adjournment of the Senate this afternoon. The Virginians refused to go into the caucus except on an explicit understanding that Gorham should be elected Secretary of the Senate. No one seemed disposed to agree to this demand. Mr. Edmunds, the story goes, said he believed the principles of civil service reform should obtain in all branches of the public service. The officers of the Senate he averred, were faithful and efficient and he was opposed to their being replaced by new men. He, therefore, moved to continue them in office. This motion was seconded by Mr. Plumb, and was agreed to with little or no debate.

Neither Mahone, Riddleberger nor Gorham was prepared for so stinging a slap in the face. The Virginia Senators are now free lances with all that the term implies, and may make things lively on the Republican side.

Colonel Hooker, who is a candidate for the office of Sergeant-at-Arms, says he does not believe any definite action has been taken, and is confident there will be a full re-organization of the Senate. Republican Senators are reticent on the subject.

Nothing will be done in regard to the Presidency of the Senate until Senator Anthony gets here.

Later and reliable reports from the caucus of the Senators are to the effect that Senator Logan offered a resolution that a clean sweep be made of the Democrats in the employ of the Senate. This resolution was opposed by Senators Edmunds and Plumb, and after a fiery debate Mr. Logan withdrew his resolution, charging cowardice among the Republican members. It is thought to night that no changes will at present be made in the Senate organization, and perhaps not until after the holidays. Then the party lash will be applied and the boys will have to go.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL.

Celebration of the Centennial in the Very Room Where He Last Met His Officers.

Special Cable to Commercial Gazette.

NEW YORK, December 4.—The centennial of General Washington's farewell to his officers, in the long room of Frances' Tavern, was celebrated to-day in the room of the building where the parting took place on December 4, 1783.

The room was decorated for the occasion. The walls were covered with paper in the form of Dutch tiles, representing the design on the blue willow pattern plate. At the upper end was a full sized portrait of Washington, in a square gold frame with an oval center, surmounted with bolly, and supported on either side with national flags. On the left were a couple of Continental clay pipes, similar to those in use one hundred years ago, hung by means of bright orange colored ribbon. The windows of the room were also hung with the stars and stripes, arranged in the form of curtains, and between each two windows on the south side were frames which contained the organization of the Chamber of Commerce in 1768, the list of the officers and members of the Chambers, with resolutions of incorporation, etc., dated 1768; the announcement of Samuel Frances when opening his tavern in 1770, and the farewell of Washington, worded as follows:

"With a heart full of love and gratitude, I now take leave of you. I most devoutly wish that your latter days may be as prosperous and happy as your former ones have been glorious and honorable."

At the lower end was an old fashioned clock, surrounded with evergreens and bordered with flags, while the national colors were festooned over the old mantle shelf, on which were pieces of rare old chinaware, in which were long clay pipes, tipped with green wax. The northern side of the room was ornamented with evergreens and the flags of the city and State. On the tables were old fashioned big bellied demijohns of large size; numbers of Uncle Tobi jugs, ancient vessels, containing long and short clay pipes, and in this cupboard were canisters of tobacco.

A YOUNG GIRL'S RUIN.

Flight From a Memphis Boarding School With One of Haverly's Minstrels.

A Sad Warning to Girls Who Flirt.

Special to the Courier Journal.

CINCINNATI, December 4.—After a year of searching, Carrie Atkins, who so mysteriously disappeared from a boarding school in Memphis, and for whom a large reward has been offered, has turned up in the person of Maud Atkins, an inmate of Frank Wright's den of shame, No 182 Broadway. Maud Atkins is a very beautiful girl, well educated and very attractive, only sixteen years old, and her story of how she was led astray from the paths of virtue, from an attractive home, loving parents, and after only one year of sin has fallen to the very bottom of degradation, is one of the saddest in the annals of a life of shame. This morning, completely overcome with despondency, having fallen so low that life was a burden, and having no friends or other means of support, she wrote to her mother of her situation, asked forgiveness and made known her intention of returning home. She was provided with money by Miss Wright, and with a ticket as far as Louisville by the Mayor.

To a Courier-Journal reporter she said: "My name is Carrie Atkins. Only one year ago I was living in Chattanooga with my parents, who are among the first people there. I know I am very pretty, and to that I owe my ruin. I was sent to a boarding school in Memphis. While there I was in the habit of taking walks with other girls, and naturally enough we all became addicted to flirting. It was in this way that I met Frank A. with whom I soon fell desperately in love. He was very handsome, and one of the most attractive men in Haverly's Minstrels, and I was so infatuated with him that, at his proposition, I ran away from school and accompanied him, and no one knew where I was. My folks were greatly excited over my mysterious disappearance, and offered a large reward for any information that would lead to my recovery. From Memphis we went to Toronto, Canada. Every attention was paid me by my lover for awhile, but he soon got tired of me, and finally threw me off altogether. Not having money nor friends, and not wanting to return to the home which I had blighted, I was not long in making my mind up to a sporting life. I went to Louisville, where I lived a few months, from there to Nashville, and finally back to Louisville. I reached Cincinnati about six weeks ago penniless and with no clothes save an old dress I wore. I received kind attentions from Miss Wright, new dresses and money. I being very sick at that time. Although I received every attention, I grew worse. I thought many times of suicide, although one would not expect such feelings in one like me. I longed to see my dear mother. Many a night I have wept bitterly, and I was anxious to let my folks know that I was still living, but, after the disgrace I had brought on them, I dared not ask their forgiveness.

"A few days ago, while sitting in the parlor, a young man who I had known in Chattanooga entered. I was so surprised and frightened that I fainted away, and after coming to he proposed to take me home. I refused. After he left I was afraid he would tell my folks of my whereabouts, and I decided to write and ask forgiveness and permission to return. My mother answered that she would start immediately for Cincinnati, and would take me home. At receiving this letter, I telegraphed that I was coming, and now I am on my way."

The story of bright, attractive and young girls, with kind and luxurious homes, going down by a life of shame is an old one, but the case of Maud Atkins is indeed a sad one—losing social position, virtue, friends, money, honor and all, falling to the very slums of iniquity in the remarkably short time of less than twelve months.

Maud Atkins is now only sixteen years old, and, although a reform may be made the terrible stigma will follow her to the grave, while her seducer will carry on his devilish work and be allowed to go unpunished.

THE COMMITTEES.

Mr. Carlisle Hard at Work—The Task is a Long One—Morrison to Have Ways and Means.

Special to the Commercial Gazette.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—Speaker Carlisle being if he would announce the committees before the holiday recess, said:

"I am hard at work upon them, and will announce them as soon as made up. This will be, I hope, before the holiday recess, but I cannot be sure. You will remember, for instance, that last year, with thirty-two less members in the House, they were not made known until just before the recess."

It has been definitely decided that Morrison, of Illinois, shall be chairman of Ways and Means. He is very pronounced in his advocacy of undertaking a general revision of the tariff. Where Mr. Carlisle is conservative and would have all changes gradual, Mr. Morrison, if he followed his own inclinations, would favor making immediate and radical reductions. The Ohio wool men may make up their minds to live in a state of constant uncertainty while he is at the head of this committee. If, the Speaker follows his own inclination, he will put Mr. Randall at the head of Appropriations. Opposition to this is expected from Mr. Blackburn, but this trouble will probably be arranged.

Frank Hurd stands a good chance of having the Judiciary Committee. It lies at present between him and Randolph Tucker. If it is assigned to the latter, Mr. Hurd will probably be put on the Ways and Means. There is a general belief that Mr. Buckner will have Banking and Currency, Mr. Cox Foreign Affairs, Mr. Rosencrans Military, and Mr. Reagan Commerce.
